

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

EDITOR'S NOTE.

The first issue of the Alumni Record was published in 1905 under the able editorship of E. P. Humphrey, '85. Since that time the number of Lawrence graduates has nearly doubled and great changes have come to our Alma Mater. It has seemed that it is time for a new edition of the Record, which has been prepared at considerable expense of labor, and is here introduced to its readers.

We recognize that this book has many imperfections. This is largely due to the fact that it is so difficult to get information from many of our graduates. In many cases four and five letters were sent out, and even then a good many failed to reply. It is also a difficult task to keep correct addresses of graduates, as but very few notify the college office when they change their place of residence. A little thought in this matter would relieve the office of much labor and insure greater accuracy in the records. Another difficulty in preparing the book has been that no alumnus could be found who was willing to undertake the work of its publication, and it has had to be prepared in the college office when spare moments occasionally presented themselves.

Anyone who notices errors or can supply missing addresses or other information will confer a great benefit by writing the college office.

We would especially call attention to the literary matter in the book which has been kindly furnished by several of our graduates and which we are confident will prove of great interest. To all these contributors we are under special obligations.

AN EARLY HISTORY OF LAWRENCE COLLEGE.

ARTHUR D. WILLETT, '11.

Being an account of happenings in Appleton between the beginning and the inauguration of the first president.

PREFACE.

The history of an institution like the history of a people is not a mere record of events but an account, perhaps only a suggestion, of all those numerous forces and influences which brought it into being and which aided or retarded its growth. In it must be included, not only those things which make themselves apparent to the eye of the casual observer, but all motives which inspired it, all endeavors which advanced it on its way and all sacrifices that breathed the breath of life into it. Not only these but also those malign and sinister influences which may have affected its life. Because these can never be known in their entirety no true history can ever be written.

This paper is submitted with the consciousness that many shortcomings will make themselves conspicuous. Much must be left untold because it has been long forgotten and many influences at work must be left unmentioned because of the meager and uncertain testimony which has been left to their existence. Nevertheless the writer believes that the following is as true and accurate account of the history of the early years of the school as it is possible for him to make.

Whatever has been recorded has been taken from the original records which are kept in the library vault. As far as judgment would allow extracts and quotations have been inserted that contemporary history may speak for itself.

The following sources have been used:

GENESIS.

Sixty-six years ago the land now occupied by our Alma Mater was covered by a primeval forest. Likewise was the whole Fox River Valley. Indeed the vast territory of Northern Wisconsin was but the home of the fur-trader and the red-man. The French bateau and the Indian canoe, laden with pelts and furs, still ran the rapids below the bluffs of Le Grand Chute. Above and below them stood the totem poles which promised safety to the swiftly flying red-man. Through the forest-stillness could be heard the melodious shout and song of the descendant of the Cœur de bois as he embarked to portage his boat.

Into this silent forest above the turbulent waters entered the founders of the school and there with infinite faith in the future, believing that what was builded well should not perish from the earth, they founded the school. Looking backward we today exclaim,

"Well done ye faithful workmen. Wisely did ye judge and wisely did ye act. Indifferent were ye to circumstance, and ever keeping before thee the great vision did labor on to the consummation of thy tasks."

This is our unqualified applause today, but if this were three-score years ago how great would be our doubting!

There is no study of greater interest than that of the genesis of things. Whether it be a drop of water or a universe the human mind is enchanted by the study of its beginnings. So it is with the beginnings of our school. The creation of Lawrence College depended upon a complexity of influences. Among them were the missionary activities of the Christian church, the altruistic ideals of a Christian business-man and a queer combination of events which brought the interests of both the church and this business-man into the Fox River valley.

In considering the beginnings of the school the earliest fact of which we need to take account is the migration of the Oneida, St. Regis, Brothertown, and Stockbridge Indians into the Fox River valley, which occurred approximately between the years 1820 and 1840. In their ancient home in New York they were being crowded continually by unscrupulous white-men and so decided to seek a home far to the West where they could dwell again in peace and comfort. One of their number, a shrewd Mohawk half-breed, who had received a slight education and who was acting as an Episcopal missionary, conceived the idea that if these tribes would move to the unsettled West he might become the dictator of a new kingdom.

He therefore encouraged their resolution by exciting them with remembrances of their wrongs and with dreams of a new kingdom. He, accompanied with several chiefs, were sent by the tribes to go to the westward and find this new paradise. They explored the lands as far west as Detroit, but finding nothing suitable, returned to New York. The tribes then appealed to the government. The government, ever ready to shift the Indian to unoccupied land, in 1820 sent out a number of men to find a suitable location. These men followed the course of the Great Lakes and finally arrived at Green Bay. All of the land in this region was owned by the Menomonee and Winnebago Indians. Through councils and inducements they were persuaded to give large tracts of land along Lake Winnebago and the Lower Fox to their eastern brethren. From this time on for twenty years bands of Indians from New York made their way westward, leaving behind them their traditions and their honored dead.

Closely connected with this movement was the action of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1832 the sixth delegated conference of this church met in Philadelphia. The committee on missions recommended "the extention of the aboriginal missions in Western and Northwestern frontiers," and asked for a volunteer. John Clark, a delegate from the New York conference offered himself, and starting out from his home reached Green Bay on the 21st day of July. The settlement of Oneida Indians at Grand Kau-Kau-lin (Kaukauna) welcomed him. By September the 15th of that year the first Methodist church west of Lake Michigan from a point fifty miles south of Chicago was built at this place. The building was 40 x 34 feet and was designed for both school and church. This was the aggressive Methodist church in Wisconsin whose spirit led Mr. Amos A. Lawrence, a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, to choose as the organization best fitted to carry out his plans in this western country.

In the year 1838 President Van Buren granted to the Mohawk missionary, who was mentioned above, a tract of land two or three miles from Depere containing over five thousand acres. This man whose Christian name was Elezer Williams, was a man crafty and wiley but indolent, and before long found himself hard pressed for ready money. He came to Boston in 1844 to borrow some money upon his five thousand acres of wild land. Coming to the city he applied to the Rev. Dr. Lathrop, pastor of the Old Unitarian church of that city. Mr. Williams was referred to Amos Lawrence, a wealthy member of his congregation. Out of kindness for the old missionary Mr. Lawrence loaned him the sum of $1,642.00 with interest at 10% to be paid in five years. He never called for either the interest or capital, and, as he explained to his son, Amos A. Lawrence, never expected that Mr. Williams would ever pay it. Mr. Lawrence on account of sickness turned his whole business over to his son, Amos A. Lawrence. Not many months passed before Mr. Williams was again in trouble. In 1842-43 his land was sold for taxes subject to redemption in three years. At the end of the three years, as he was about to lose the land, Mr. Amos A. Lawrence bought the land outright from him. He gave him what was then a generous sum. Mr. Williams was allowed to live on the land as long as he lived, but he was ever a source of annoyance to Mr. Lawrence. It was this same Elezer Williams who later came into prominence throughout the United States and to some extent Europe as being the supposed son of the guillotined Louis XVI. of France. Rumor spread abroad that he was the lost dauphin and was heir to the French throne. About him was later woven the popular novel Lazarre. His claims to the French throne were no more preposterous than many which he was continually making upon the beneficence of Mr. Lawrence.

Having become the possessor of this land in Wisconsin Mr. Lawrence's first idea was to people it with good settlers and to provide schools for them and for the neighboring Indian children. Through Mr. Eastman of Green Bay, who was acting as Mr. Lawrence's agent for his Wisconsin lands, a number of settlers were induced to come and develop the land. To a proposition for the schooling of their children made by Mr. Lawrence, they replied that a competent teacher could be secured for fifteen dollars per month. But Mr. Lawrence had larger plans than a mere grammar-school. As early as 1844 he communicated with Mr. Eastman his desires to found a literary institution on his lands along the Fox River.

"I have been thinking more on the Williams land, and there seems to be a good opportunity, not only of improving the tone of morals and the standards of education in that vicinity, but also of conferring a lasting benefit on a portion of our countrymen who need it," he wrote to Mr. Eastman.

In the year 1845 he had evidently disclosed to Mr. Eastman his plan of building the institute, but in January, 1846 he withdrew the proposition. The lands did not appear to be worth much, and Mr. Williams seemed to be forwarding schemes to reclaim them. He wrote to Mr. H. S. Baird of Green Bay on January 4, 1846,

"Probably nothing will be done by the Methodists, at any rate at present." And later he says, "the less said about it the better."

However during this year Mr. Lawrence took steps to forward the launching of his plans. He put into the hands of William Appleton, James Amory, Charles H. Parker, of Boston, Mass., as trustees, ten thousand dollars to be transferred to the institution when the conditions of the indenture should be met with by the people of Wisconsin.

He therefore made preparations to come to Wisconsin and to visit the region of Green Bay and the Fox River. Unfortunately the semi-monthly boat which plied between Buffalo and Green Bay stopped running and a quick and certain trip was made impossible. Mr. Lawrence therefore decided not to come. Mr. Elezer Williams wrote to him at this time,

"We are at length compelled, and that with great reluctance, to give up the pleasing idea of waiting for you at our Indian wigwam. We sincerely hope that you will make another effort to visit these ends of the earth."

Unable to visit the field for himself he communicated further with Mr. Eastman on the matter, and asked him to write to the Presiding Elder of the district and to see what the Conference would do about becoming responsible for such an institution. Consequently Rev. Mr. Sampson of Fond du Lac shortly afterward received the following communication from Mr. Eastman:

"Elder Wm. H. Sampson,

Dear sir: I am in receipt of a letter from a gentleman in Boston, whose name I am not at liberty to disclose, containing the following proposition which I take the liberty of tendering to you to be submitted to your annual conference should you see fit to do so.

"If there is any certainty of a vigorous co-operation of any other body, lay or clerical, I should be willing to put such a sum of money in the hands of trustees as placed at interest will in ten years amount to $10,000 and also give (provided there should be no failure in the case of my death) the sum of one thousand dollars yearly for ten years toward securing a competent salary to such instructors as may be required, or if necessary, I will pay the $10,000 in cash now to secure the desired object. But all this is founded upon the expectation of a similar sum from other quarters. I should have a high opinion of the adaptation of the Methodists to the people in the West, and I think from all I can learn, that their institutions are carried on with more vigor, and diffuse more good from the same means than others. It seems to be decided that all literary institutions must be controlled by some sect, and efforts to prevent this have often blasted their usefulness. I wish you to keep this to yourself as far as possible, at any rate keep my name out of it."

The proposition it is proper to add is for the establishing of an institution of learning at or near DePere, Brown Co., which appears to be a sine quo non with the gentleman who makes it. Please take the trouble to present the above to your conference. If there is any reasonable prospect of the society meeting the same with a similar endowment, inform me of the disposition as soon as possible; meantime I should be glad to hear your views on the subject. Should you write soon you will please address to Boston, Mass.

H. Eugene Eastman.

Green Bay, April 17, 1846.

The Methodists of Wisconsin at this same time were anxiously considering the matter of establishing such a school. "There was a prayerful anxiety over the subject; several of us had talked the matter over, but could fix on no definite plan or location," wrote Mr. Sampson.

The Rock River Conference, which included Wisconsin at this time, met this year at Peoria, Illinois. The matter was laid before the educational committee but was not received with a great deal of enthusiasm. Mr. Eastman's reputation was not such as would inspire confidence and his taciturnity in regard to the identity of the proposing donor led to a feeling of suspicion. Then too, the conference was raising money for a similar institution in Illinois and did not care to take the responsibility of starting another school. The educational committee put the matter into Mr. Sampson's hands to see what he could discover about the trustworthiness of the proposition.

Just at this time a new personage appeared in Wisconsin, whose activities for some years to come were to be peculiarly identified with the life of the institution. This man was Rev. Reeder Smith. He came from Mr. Lawrence to see what could be done about establishing the proposed institute. His connection with the college business came about in a rather peculiar manner.

A few months before he was traveling in the interests of Albion College, Michigan, under a contract to raise $25,000 for that institution. This business drew him to Boston, and to the office of Mr. Lawrence who was already noted for his benevolence. Mr. Lawrence replied to his solicitations that he was starting a school in Wisconsin and did not feel free to help the Michigan institution. Mr. Smith seemed anxious to close up his business with Albion college, and immediately interested himself in Wisconsin. Mr. Lawrence agreed to allow him to act as his agent in conference with the Methodists of Wisconsin. His arrival, coming as he did as the donor's representative and bearing specific knowledge of the donor's plans, put an end to the mystery that over-shadowed Mr. Eastman's proposition, and a convention of ministers and laymen was called at Milwaukee Dec. 28, 1846 to discuss the offer. Mr. Smith presented the donor's name and proposition. The offer was heartily accepted and a committee consisting of Reeder Smith, George H. Day and Henry R. Colman drafted a charter for the school, naming it "The Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin." A committee proceeded to Madison, where the territorial legislature was in session and presented the following memorial:

"To the Honorable Members of the Council and the House of Representatives of the Territory of Wisconsin.

"Your memorialists, citizens of the Territory of Wisconsin, believing that the wants of the rapidly increasing population of the Northern and Eastern portions of this Territory demand that a literary institution should be established upon a permanent basis,

"And whereas a liberal offer has been made by a gentleman of Boston, Massachusetts, for the establishment of such an Institution, to be located upon the Fox river between Grand Kakalin and Lake Winnebago, would respectively pray your honorable body to pass an act incorporating a Literary Institution, to be entitled the Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin, with all the powers usually conferred upon colleges and similar institutions in the United States."

Milwaukee, Dec. 29, 1846.

The original of this memorial is hanging upon the wall in the current-magazine reading-room of the Appleton Public Library.

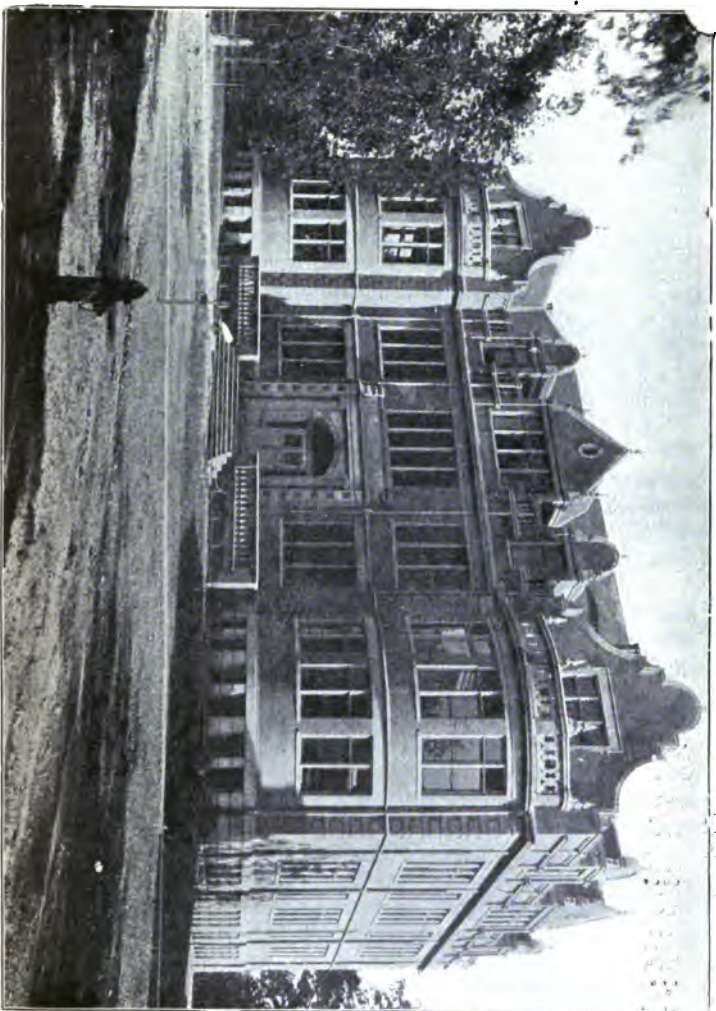

After some unnecessary delay, and after a threatened defeat the bill was rescued and passed by the influence of the Hon. Mason C. Darling, who was president of the council, and the following charter was enacted.

AN ACT

To Incorporate Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin.

Be it enacted by the Council and the House of Representatives of the Territory of Wisconsin:

Sec. 1. That Reeder Smith, H. R. Colman and their associates and their successors be and they are hereby created a body politic and corporate to be styled the Board of Trustees of the Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin, and shall be said trustees of said corporation for the purposes of further establishing, maintaining and conducting this institution of learning for the education of youth generally, and by the afore-said corporate name to remain in perpetual succession, with full power to sue and be sued, to plead and be pleaded, to acquire, hold and convey property, real and personal, provided always that the annual income shall not exceed ten thousand dollars; to have and use a common seal, to alter and renew the same at pleasure, to make and alter from time to time such by-laws as they may deem necessary for the government of the said institution, its officers and servants; provided that such by-laws are not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of the United States or this territory; also to have power to confer on those whom they deem worthy all such honors and degrees as are usually conferred in colleges and like institutions in the United States.

Sec. 2. There shall be at all times thirteen trustees of said corporation, a majority of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. No religious tenet or opinion shall be required for the qualification for the office of Trustee except a full belief in divine revelation; nor of any student shall any religious tenet be required to entitle them to all of the privileges of the institution; and no particular tenets distinguishing between the different Christian denominations, shall be required as a qualification for professors in said institution and no student shall be required to attend religious worship with any specific denomination, except as specified by the student himself, his parents or guardians.

Sec. 3. That the said institution shall be located on the Fox River between Lake Kakalin and the foot of Winnebago Lake, at such place as the trustees shall select, and shall be erected on a plan sufficiently extensive to afford ample facilities to perfect the scholar, it being understood that at no time are they required to exceed the means under their control.

Sec. 4.—That the Board of Trustees shall hold their first meeting at Fond du Lac within six months after the passing of this act. Provided a majority should fail at this meeting, the majority shall have authority to organize and adjourn to such place and time or times as they may judge proper to secure a majority of the board, who shall have power to elect a president, two vice presidents, secretary and treasurer, who shall be termed the executive committee of said board, and shall have power to execute all business of the corporation committed to the by-laws of the institute.

Sec. 5. The Board of Trustees shall at their first business meeting be divided into three classes, four in the first, four in the second, and five in the third. They shall appoint in their first business meeting to be held within one year thereafter, at which time the office of the first class shall expire, and in one year from that time the second class and the third class in one year therefrom and the office of one class of trustees to expire annually thereafter in rotation. The board shall have authority to appoint all officers, teachers and agents of the institution, except the president, who shall be elected by ballot by the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Wisconsin, which conference shall elect also annually by ballot a visiting committee consisting of nine, whose duties it shall be to attend all examinations of the institution and look into the condition generally and report thereon and at the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees they shall be ex-officio members and shall form a joint board with the trustees, who shall have power to fill all vacancies in the board occurring by expiration of office, death, or otherwise.

Sec. 6. Said Board of Trustees shall meet on their own adjournment, and the president with the concurrence of two trustees, or any four trustees may call special meetings of the board by giving notice to the board in writing or otherwise at least ten days before the time of such meeting, and any trustee may be removed for neglect of duty for more than a year.

Sec. 7. That the Board of Trustees shall faithfully apply funds by them collected or received according to their best judgment in erecting suitable buildings, supporting the necessary officers, instructors and servants, in procuring books and apparatus necessary to the success of the institution: provided never-the-less, that in case of any donation or bequest be made for particular purposes which accord with the designs of the institution, the corporation shall receive and accept the same. Every donation or bequest shall be applied in conformity to the conditions or design expressed by the donor.

Sec. 8. This act may at any time be altered or amended by the legislature.

WM. SHAW,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MASON C. DARLING,

President of the Council.

Approved Jan. 15, 1847.

HENRY DODGE, Governor.

This charter was not altogether satisfactory to Mr. Lawrence. He did not approve of the income being limited to $10,000, nor did he think it wise to leave the election of the president in the hands of the conference. He felt that the conference, being a large body, meeting but once a year and then over-loaded with business, would not be competent to choose the president. He therefore recommended that the election be given to the board of trustees. His suggestions were later incorporated into the new charter.

While the passage of the charter was successful a second petition was lost. This was a petition asking the granting to Lawrence Institute some of the lands reserved for university purposes. In February 1838 an appropriation of some 140,000 acres was made to the territory for university purposes. About 3,500 acres of this land lay in the vicinity of Grand Chute, now Appleton. Mr. Eastman advised Mr. Lawrence to request a grant of this land from the legislature after Wisconsin should have become a state. He expressed himself as being confident that the request would be generously met but put special emphasis on delaying the petition until the territory should become a state as nothing could be done until that time.

However this latter advice was disregarded by the committee, and the day after the presentation of the petition for the charter was made, a petition for a grant of land to the value of $20,000 was filed. Mr. Eastman said that the matter was poorly handled. In the first place, he says, it was foolishness to present the petition before the state constitution was adopted, and in the second place the legislature was prejudiced by the amount of emphasis which was put upon the aptness of Methodism to advance education. Mr. Smith, who presented the petition, read to the legislature that part of Mr. Lawrence's letter in which he states that the Methodist denomination "diffuses more knowledge with the same means than any other denomination." This prejudiced the members of other denominations, especially the Roman Catholics, and the petition, though read three times, failed to pass.

LOCATING THE SCHOOL.

The charter stated that the institution should be situated on the Fox River somewhere between Depere and Winnebago Rapids. It was Mr. Lawrence's wish that the school be situated upon his lands, but the committee on location were not satisfied with them. Mr. Sampson seriously objected to it on account of the difficulty of access and account of the settlers who were mainly French and half-breed Indians. Mr.

Smith wrote that the locating of the school on the Williams' land would be impracticable. He said, "I have traveled in different parts of this territory to make the acquaintance and interest the people in this matter. I find that the location proposed is so far from the settlers in the country and from the lands upon which the Yankees settle, that all have thought it impracticable."

However, no positive site was decided upon. On Sept. 7, 1847 the committee consisting of M. C. Darling, N. P. Talmadge, H. S. Baird, L. M. Martin, Wm. Sampson and Reeder Smith (Mr. Day took Mr. Darling's place) met at the Astor House at Green Bay and discussed various locations. Failing to agree each member pledged himself to solicit propositions in writing from land-owners along the Fox who would offer inducements for its location.

In the weeks that followed several inducements were made but none of importance save the ones at Grand Chute and Winnebago Rapids. A Mr. Jones of "Winnebago Rapids at the foot of Lake Winnebago" proposed to give forty acres of land in the village plot (Neenah) and "water-power sufficient to run four runs of stone" on the condition that the institution should be located there. However, the favorite site of the men who were chosen to survey the land from Depere to Winnebago rapids were Grand Chute, the present location. These men, Reeder Smith, Wm. Sampson and Henry R. Colman traveled the whole river-bank either on foot or on horse-back, and could find no equal to the Chute. It seems to have been the wish of the promoters of the institution to place the school here. Mr. Smith, in sending Mr. Lawrence a rude drawing of the lands along the Fox river, wrote:

"No. 13, extending from one black mark to another made across the river embraces a water-power, which, in my opinion is to become a second Lowell. This spot is to exceed in interest any other point on the river. This is one of the most enchanting and romantic spots I ever saw. There is no locality that can surpass this for a literary institution."

And on January 6, 1847, Mr. Henry R. Colman wrote to Mr. Lawrence:

"In beauty of scenery, fertility of soil, and the opportunity afforded for fine farming country around the institution, it exceeds by far any on the river."

The land at this place was chiefly owned by Messrs. Lawe, Meade, Whitney and Grignon. The two former agreed to give thirty-one acres of land each provided that the school should be located on it. Mr. Whitney gave nothing directly to the school but sold land very cheaply to Mr. Smith, afterwards claiming that he gave it to the school. Land at this time was selling at from three to five dollars per acre. When the location of the school became a settled fact Mr. Whitney and Mr. Grignon bought up the river front for speculation and held it at $200 per acre. The proposition of Mr. Lawe and Mr. Meade was accepted by the committee and on Aug. 9, 1848 they reported that they had "fixed upon the place on the Fox river called and known by the name of Grand Chute, on section 26, Town 21, range 17."

Mr. Lawrence regreted that his own land had not been chosen for the site but did not let this interfere with his loyalty to the infant institution. In a letter to Mr. Eastman on March 15, 1848 he said:

"It is a matter of regret to me that those in whose hands the matter rests should have come to a conclusion (I presume an honest one and I trust a correct one also) to place it at a distance from my land. Had I known it would have been so I never should have made the offer. I shall be gratified, however, if it is successful, and shall take pride and pleasure in rendering it assistance if it be conducted on correct principles."

"GETTING UNDER WAY."

At this time the visible history of the school commences. The charter was obtained and the location was decided upon. The next step was the raising of the original $10,000 and the erecting of the building. The success of the institution now lay in the abiding faith and the convincing enthusiasm of a few consecrated men. The days which were to follow were to be days of toil and sacrifice; days in which were to be mingled sunlight and shadow, confidence and skepticism, hope and despair. Having caught a glimpse of the light by the wicket-gate, there was yet the Slough of Despond to be crossed before the certain path could be reached. To the Methodist clergy of Wisconsin and especially of the Fond du Lac district the personal sacrifice was great. Writing from memory a member of one of these preacher's families, wrote:

"They gathered at my father's home at Oshkosh, for my father, S. M. Stone, was a preacher in charge of the Winnebago Circuit which embraced the whole county.

"There on the lake-shore in a log parsonage, ten by twelve feet were the inside dimensions of the same, those noble, self-sacrificing men planned for the institution before there was a tree cut in Appleton, and not only planned but divided their little store to start the wheel rolling. My father at that time gave $100.00 which was a fifth of all his earthly possessions, and the rest did likewise."

Rev. Wm. Sampson, the presiding elder of the district, had the matter on his heart more than any other man.

"I spent many a sleepless night in planning to meet the exigencies of the hour," he wrote. "In order to carry forward the work I found it necessary to dispose of my property in the city of Fond du Lac where I owned a dwelling, two lots and thirty acres of land, also one hundred and twenty of timber land two miles north on the west side of the lake. As money was close I had to sell at a great sacrifice, but risked all, reputation and property on the success of the Lawrence University.

One cannot but be inspired by the note of true heroism which dominated the lives of many of these founders of the college. Nor can one forget the generosity of Mr. Lawrence. Never was a gift offered with more whole-souled liberalism and unselfishness than was his. He did not propose the name of "Lawrence" to the school and even gave anyone the right to name it who would give a sum of money equal to his own gift. He gave it with no spirit of speculation or of gaining the name of philanthropist. The history of the next few years is associated with a few men who preached to the multitudes, "Cast thy bread upon the waters and it shall return unto thee" and believed it so sincerely that the school became a matter of speculation to them. But this spirit was infinitely removed from a majority of the founders and especially from Mr. Lawrence.

At the first annual Trustees' meeting, which was held in Temperance Hall, Fond du Lac, Rev. Wm. Sampson was appointed principal of the Preparatory department and authorized to collect funds and to sell scholarships. Mr. Smith was busy raising funds for Albion college and so could help Lawrence but very little. Rev. Sampson, although not yet relieved of his work as presiding elder, threw himself into the new enterprise with vigor and enthusiasm.

The gift of Mr. Lawrence was in the form of twenty shares of the Salmon Falls Manufacturing Co. According to the indenture a like sum should be raised by May 1, 1848. The trustees and Mr. Sampson did their best but were unable to meet the requirement. However it could have been met if the location of the school had been changed to Winnebago Rapids, where the offer of Mr. Jones could have been taken advantage of, and it is probable that this course of action would have followed if Mr. Lawrence had not extended the time limit. Mr. Lawrence generously changed the limiting date so that the trustees retained the site at Grand Chute.

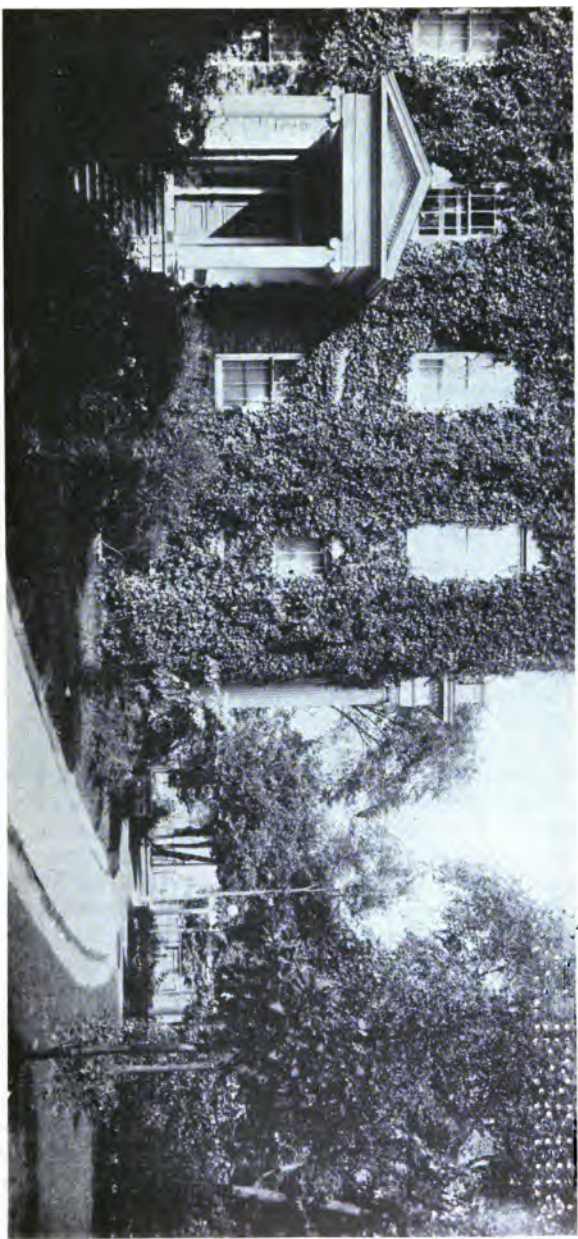

Usual financial schemes were promoted. Mr. Sampson somewhat ironically wrote, having in memory certain persons from the East whose attitude toward Wisconsin was one of extreme patronage:

"During the year many letters were written and the necessary amount of gassing was done East and West to bring 'such a noble and benevolent enterprise' into notoriety, and especially to magnify the disinterestedness of certain individuals who condescended to attend to the wants of the uneducated and uncivilized West with so much self-sacrifice."

The Wisconsin Conference passed resolutions to try to raise $30,000 for the school, in the East. The resolution read: "In view of our destitution in the West, we are still under the necessity of looking to the noble-hearted in the East to assist in raising thirty-thousand dollars, ten thousand of which will be needed this year to carry out this philanthropic enterprise."

The Wisconsin conference had just formed and the total church membership, including probationers and local preachers numbered but 6,943. These members were mostly poor pioneers and the task of raising $10,000 seemed almost impossible.

Mr. Lawrence rightly thought that the people of Wisconsin ought to put forth much effort to raise the money within their own state. His father wrote to him:

CAMPUS VIEW.

"The people there must do all they can to build up an Oxford or a Cambridge that shall be the glory of Wisconsin."

Hard as the struggle was, by July 18, 1848, $11,000 was raised and the proposition of Mr. Lawrence was assured. Of the $11,000, $5,400 was in scholarships and could not immediately be turned into money. To secure the gift of Mr. Lawrence, Hon. Mason C. Darling, president of the board of trustees, mortgaged his property for $3,000 and took the scholarships as security.

The contents of the first subscription book is here reproduced. The little pamphlet is made of blue sheets of paper, hand sewed with linen thread. Script is used throughout. It was probably manufactured by one of the good preachers' wives on the district. Marks and cancellations are reproduced as in the original.

Notice to the Benefactors of Our Country.

The Lawrence Institute is to include a preparatory and Teachers Department, under the same charter, affording gratuitous advantages to both sexes of Germans and Indians.

A location for this Institution has been selected in Wisconsin on the Fox River, below the Rapids of Winnebago Lake, and above Astor. This location is a very desirable one, as it promises many advantages. It is decidedly a healthy spot; and desirable through its accessibility through nature's thoroughfare which now carries through her mighty channel articles of all kinds of Commerce for the Merchant and Farmer for hundreds of miles from Green Bay into the Interior. Amos A. Lawrence, Esq., of Boston, Mass., has regarded this location very important, as an opening, for the promotion of good morals and education among the promiscuous crowds of immigrants in a portion of the country where it is most needed, and also for the benefit of the numerous tribes of uncivilized natives in the West and the half civilized which are permanently located near the spot. To encourage the carrying forward of a noble enterprise to elevate and improve all classes, Mr. Lawrence has made over to Trustees the sum of $10,000.00 to be available when an equal sum shall have been raised from any other source. Who can benefit the world more with his means, than to respond, either in part or in whole, to this generous proposition?

We the subscribers, friends to the promotion of good morals and literature in our rapidly populating Western Country,- believing that our future National independence and prosperity is to be controlled by the Institutions and efforts of the present day that an institution at the place designated and at the place above described would greatly promote the objects as set forth;—we do therefore agree and obligate ourselves to pay the Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin or the Agent of said Institution, the several sums affixed to our respective names to be applied according to the provisions of its charter, secured in January, 1847.

The donation of Governor Elisha Harris of Rhode Island was afterwards found to be of only partial value. It seems that the Academy at Providence owed him several thousand dollars. One thousand of this debt was transferred to Mr. Smith for Lawrence Institute with the understanding that it should never be called for until the academy was able to pay it without embarrassment. In March of 1861 the academy went into bankruptcy and paid but twenty-five cents on the dollar, so that Lawrence received but two hundred fifty dollars from this donation.

In April 1848 a plan to raise money by scholarships, entitling each subscriber to "ten years of free tuition for his, her or their heirs in said University" was inaugurated, but as the times were exceedingly hard only about $600 was raised.

The salaries of the professors were fixed at $400 per annum and that of the preceptress at $250.

On Oct. 20, '49 at the annual meeting of the trustees the assets of the institution were valued at a little over $25,000.

On March 21, 1849 Governor Nelson Newey signed an amendment to the Lawrence charter. The amendment contained three main changes. First, the name of the school was changed from Lawrence Institute to Lawrence University. Secondly, the limit of the income of the school was changed from $10,000 to $60,000. Thirdly, the power of election of the president of the school was changed from the Methodist conference to the board of trustees. The last two changes were suggested by Mr. Lawrence but the first was made against his pleasure. Speaking of naming the school, he at an earlier date said:

"I think that the old fashioned name 'college' or 'school' is as good as any. 'University' would hardly do for such a young child."

In a volume of copied letters he wrote:

"To be given to Lawrence University (so called) at Appleton, Wis."

Then in large pencil-scrrawl, written evidently in his old age, he added:

"I named it Institute."

However, the popular taste for high-sounding names overbore the more modest and exact title. Yet there is much defence for the name 'university' as applied in the early days to the school. In these early times, before the great state university had yet been begun, who knew but what this school in the north should some day become "an Oxford or a Cambridge" as Mr. Lawrence's father had hoped? Up to about 1880 Wisconsin University and Lawrence University were about equal in size, the former then shooting ahead because of large state appropriations. It must also be remembered that in 1849 the distinction between college and university was not as clearly drawn as today.

THE FIRST BUILDING.

The project of the University being assured the next step was the erection of a building. Great was the faith of these men who dared thus to enter the primeval forest where no fireside cheered the human heart, save that of the red-man, and where no foot trod save that of the trapper, and where no voice was heard save those native voices of the wood, and fearlessly and with the confidence of prophets erect an edifice which should stand as a beacon-light to those people who dwelt in darkness. Many men have since learned to bow before these prophets of old and call them blessed.

"When the board commenced operations at Appleton," wrote Mr. Darling, "—there was not the house of a white man for many miles of the site nor anything but the raw materials in the crudest state for building."

The account given by Mr. Sampson, the chief of the prophets, is most interesting.

"My family," he says, "resided in Fond du Lac and as there was no place for them at Grand Chute except the forest, I could not take them from the city until I built a shanty to shelter them——. I arranged matters at home, packed my trunk, and the 7th of Sept. 1848 left for the scene of operations. I took the steamer Manchester, the same they used to draw over the sand-bar at Taychudah with a yoke of stags, arrived at Neenah about noon, secured a passage alone in an Indian dug-out to the Grand Chute, and took lodgings in a shanty hotel about one mile south of west from the present court-house, kept by Mr. Thurber, the nearest house to the place of business. I began to cut away the thick underbrush and soon had a road cleared from the old Indian trail on the river bank to the block on which Mr. Breuster's beautiful residence now stands."

"Mr. Breuster's beautiful residence" is the building now used for practice by the Conservatory of Music. "Academy Square" included this whole block, and the first building was erected in the center of this.

As soon as operations for building had begun settlers began to pour into this new country and before long there were numerous little shanties bordering along the river. Mr. Smith wrote to Mr. Lawrence:

"My great surprise here is to find such determination to settle the town before I can open the streets to the lots." And in another letter he wrote:

"College Avenue west of University Square is all wanted, or rather, the lots on either side are wanted for business, and none of the streets are entirely open except one."

On April 11, 1849, the executive committee met at the home of Mr. Reeder Smith in Appleton and passed the following resolutions:

1. That the building be placed in the center of Academy Square.
2. That a well be dug.
3. That a planed-board fence be erected about the square.
4. That the plan of the building, which had been made in Boston, be changed so as to have four gables.

According to the plans the building was to have been completed by January 1, 1848, but on account of the wet fall the lumber, which had to be hauled through the dense forest from Duck Creek, twenty miles distant, failed to be delivered. As Mr. Smith, in whose hands the building of the structure rested, did not arrive until February the winter was gone before the lumber could be sledged. Delay after delay occurred until many people began to lose hope in the enterprise. However, the work slowly progressed. On May 25, 1849 Mr. Smith wrote to Mr. Lawrence:

"The stone-work is up to the top of the doors and windows. The inside work is (about) made and the frame will be raised in four weeks."

The frame was up by July 3rd, although not completed until the fall of 1850. On July 4th the new community held an enthusiastic celebration within its enclosure. From now on it became the center of public gatherings of the vicinity. Divine worship for the community was held regularly in the building. Never must the school forget that it was founded amid prayers and that it was a temple of worship before it became the home of the scholar.

The building complete cost $7,000. It was four stories in height and was seventy feet long and thirty feet wide. The first story was of stone while the remainder was of frame. It was to serve for recitations, chapel, laboratory, dining-room, kitchen and dormitory for students and faculty. To cap all those having the erection of the building in charge had little knowledge of the needs of a school and made the interior of the building exceedingly awkward and inconvenient. The lesson which was learned was incorporated into the main building, built some few years later.

THE OPENING OF THE SCHOOL.

At last the long-hoped-for had become a reality. Years afterward Miss Julia Colman wrote:

"All this (building of the school) was eagerly watched by many, who like myself, had been waiting and preparing for the long desired school. Of course everything was new at the opening, but as many of us were the children of missionaries and pioneers, we had previously taken up our abodes in log houses and unfinished "frames" so that a building like the "Preparatory Department" with two stories and a basement "done off" seemed to realize some of our dreams of laying the foundations of future greatness in a new country."

Mr. Sampson wrote to Mr. Lawrence:

"There is a general interest felt in its success and from the applications already made to me for admittance I judge we shall open with a large number of students.

Through the columns of The Christian Advocate and Journal, The Western Christian Advocate, The Northern Christian Advocate, The Madison Argus, The Milwaukee Sentinel and the Fond du Lac papers the following announcement was made:

LAWRENCE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN.

The trustees of Lawrence University hereby announce to the friends of the institution and the public generally that the Preparatory Department will be opened for the reception of students on Monday, the twelfth of November next, under the supervision of Rev. William Sampson as principal. In view of encouragement given the board of trustees at their annual meeting they resolved to fill the board of instruction and according to direction the Executive Board at their late meeting appointed Mr. Romulus Kellogg professor of languages and Mr. James M. Phinney, professor of Mathematics, who will assist in the general management of the school, and particularly preparing students for a University course. These gentlemen have been thoroughly educated, and together with the principal have been well and favorably known as successful teachers.

The services of a competent preceptress will also be secured, and every possible facility will be given, both to young men and ladies to complete a thorough education. The price of tuition per quarter of 11 weeks will be as follows:

Elementary English branches.....	$3.00
Higher English branches .....	$4.00
Languages, mathematics, natural, mental and moral science .....	$5.00
Drawing, painting and music, usual extra charges.

The Institution is beautifully located on the west of the Fox River in the village of Appleton, Brown County in one of the most beautiful places of the West, where everything may be made to contribute to health, comfort and success of the students, and no pains will be spared to give general satisfaction. Board in the Institution, except lights and fuel, $1.50. In private families $1.50 to $2.00.

Appleton, Sept. 12, 1849.

By order of Board.

Wm. H. Sampson,

Secretary of Board.

On Nov. 12, 1849 the doors of the school were flung open to the aspiring youth of Wisconsin. On the first day thirty-five were enrolled; by the 8th of December the number had increased to sixty; by the last of December seventy were enrolled and Mr. Sampson wrote to Mr. Lawrence: "Students continue to come."

The faculty consisted of Wm. Sampson, principal; R. O. Kellogg, professor of languages; J. M. Phinney, professor of mathematics; Miss Emile M. Crooker, preceptress and teacher of music. Henry R. Colman, on account of loss of voice, resigned the pastorate and became steward. Professors Phinney and Kellogg both came from Wesleyan University in Connecticut and Miss Crooker came from Oberlin College, Ohio.

Of those early days Rev. Henry Colman writes in his usual happy strain:

"My father, unable to preach from a broken voice, became steward and boarded teachers and students for $1.50 per week, including bed-linen, while the institution threw in the room-rent. I rang the bell, made fire for morning prayers at six, when Professor Kellogg came down with his tallow dip, read and shivered, shivered and prayed, while the students sat around wrapped in long shawls or big overcoats, which covered a multitude of negligences."

As there were no students ready for the college course the institution had to prepare them. Many students had no grammar-school education so that the institution had to become a training school for academy and college before it could take up regular college work. In the courses of instruction the emphasis is laid upon the classics but on the whole the courses were quite broad for that day. The curriculum was as follows:

CARNEGIE LIBRARY.

COLLEGIATE PREPARATORY COURSE.

(Including three years).

First Year.

First and Second Quarters: Latin, Natural Philosophy, Chemistry.

Third and Fourth Quarters: Latin, Greek, Geology, Botany.

Second Year.

First and Second Quarters: Latin, Greek, Algebra.

Third and Fourth Quarters: Latin, Greek, Geometry.

Third Year.

First Quarter: Latin, Greek, Algebra, Mental Philosophy.

Second Quarter: Latin, Greek, Algebra, Moral Science.

Third Quarter: Latin, Greek, Rhetoric, Political Economy.

Fourth Quarter: Greek, Elements of Criticism, Logic.

The above course was for men only.

Co-education was as yet such an unheard-of thing that the school hardly dared to print the same course for both men and women. Although the men and women generally attended the same classes the women were officially separate from the men and their department was known as the "Female Branch." The curriculum is as follows:

GRADUATE COURSE FOR LADIES.

(Including three years).

First Year.

First Quarter: Latin, Natural Philosophy, Chemistry.

Second Quarter: Latin, Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, Anatomy and Physiology.

Third Quarter: Latin, French, Astronomy, Philosophy and Natural History.

Fourth Quarter: Latin, French, Algebra.

Second Year.

First and Second Quarters: Latin, French, Algebra.

Third Quarter: Latin, French, Geometry.

Fourth Quarter: French, Geometry, Botany.

Third Year.

First Quarter: Mental Philosophy, Natural Theology.

Second Quarter: Mental Philosophy, Natural Theology, Moral Science.

Third Quarter: Moral Science, Rhetoric, Elements of Criticism.

Fourth Quarter: Elements of Criticism, Rhetoric, Logic.

The Academic Preparatory course was a one year course and consisted of reading, spelling, arithmetic, grammar, analysis, geography, and book-keeping and penmanship.

The first printed catalogue is a curious bit of work. It consists of a small pamphlet with a startling pink cover and a ponderous title.

For 1850-51

The world at large was informed of the whereabouts and accessibility of the school.

"Although in a newly settled portion of the state it is quite accessible and students from any quarter can reach it with but little difficulty or delay. During the season of navigation steam-boats ply daily from Fond du Lac to Appleton with only nine miles of land-carriage. Daily communication is sustained with Green Bay," says this catalogue. The school year was announced as containing four terms of eleven weeks each, beginning July 18, 1851 and closing June 5, 1852.

Student expenses are summed up in much the usual manner.

"Board in the institution, including room-rent and use of furniture will be $1.63 per week, payable monthly or quarterly in advance. The students will furnish their own rooms with wash-bowls, towels, brooms, lights, and fuel."

"Summary of annual expenses:

Tuition from .....	$12.00 to $20.00
Incidentals .....	$ 1.00 to $11.00
Board 44 weeks.....	$71.50 to $71.50
Washing .....	$ 5.00 to $10.00
Fuel .....	$ 1.50 to $ 3.00
Books, stationery .....	$ 6.00 to $12.00

The laws for governing the school are very interesting. The catalogue says:

"In the government of the school the faculty, while strict, firm and watchful, will endeavor to secure not only the improvement of the students but their happiness, and to induce in them such habits as become ladies and gentlemen, among which habits are application, punctuality and politeness."

In 1849 the trustees passed the following "By-Laws":

1. Students shall rise in the morning at the ringing of the first bell.

2. During the hours of study no student shall be unnecessarily absent from his room, or leave the institution premises, or visit the room of a fellow student, without the permission of some one of the officers.

3. On being notified by the bell or otherwise, to attend prayers, recitations, or other exercises, the students shall repair without delay to the place appointed.

4. At no time and in no case shall clamorous noise, athletic exercises, smoking tobacco in seminary buildings, the use of gun-powder or fire-arms on the seminary premises, be allowed; nor shall the use of profane or obscene language, intoxicating drinks, playing at games of chance, or indulgence in indecorous conduct, be allowed in the seminary buildings or elsewhere.

5. Every student shall leave his room in as good condition as he found it when located therein, and all injuries to it, during the time he occupies it shall be charged to him in the stewards bill. In no case may dirt, ashes, water, or other material be thrown out of the Seminary windows. The officers may have access at all times to the rooms of the students.

6. A strict observance of the Sabbath will be required of all students. On no account may they go abroad into the fields, frequent the village, or collect at each other's rooms without permission from the proper officers. Sobriety and silence must be observed throughout the Sabbath. Attendance at church in the morning and afternoon, at each place as (they, their parents, or their guardians) may prefer, is required of all students. Such as desire to spend their Sabbaths with their friends away from the institution must notify some one of the officers of such desire, and gain their consent before leaving.

7. Cleanliness and neatness of person must be observed. Students will be expected to thoroughly clean their rooms as often as once in two weeks.

8. No student shall at any time interfere or meddle with the steward's department, except when permitted, and perfect propriety must be observed by every student in the dining-room.

9. No student may attend mixed assemblages or parties, of any kind, without permission; nor may any gentleman or lady ride or walk out together without express permission.

10. No lady shall receive calls from gentlemen in their rooms or elsewhere. Visits if received at all must be received in the parlor or other appropriate rooms or places assigned at the boarding places of the ladies, and then not during study hours, nor at unreasonable hours.

11. No male student is permitted to visit or enter that part of the building assigned exclusively to females, except those in the immediate employ of the steward.

12. If any male student have a relative in the female department, whom he wishes to see, he will be permitted to go to the steward's room, request her to be sent for, and there converse with her. Brothers can also walk out with their sisters by permission of some one of the faculty, but with no others.

13. Female students shall be under the same restrictions as the males with regard to the above regulations. In case of confinement by sickness, however, permission is given to visit each other at their rooms.

14. If any student intentionally violates the above regulations, for the first offense he shall be punished at the discretion of the faculty, for the second, be dismissed from the institution.

15. Any temporary prudential regulation the faculty may see fit to adopt for the government of the school shall be equally binding with any of the by-laws.

Weekly exercises in declamation and composition were required of the gentlemen, but composition only was required of the ladies. Examinations were given at the end of each quarter and at the end of the year an exhibition was held. Writing to Mr. Lawrence concerning the first one Mr. Sampson says:

"We had a fine examination and exhibition at the close of the year. Strangers from abroad declare it to be equal to anything of the kind they had ever witnessed and I heard several who had attended many of the first schools in the East thus compliment us. Our prospects thus far are very flattering."

On alternate Saturdays exercises of a literary nature were carried on by the students. Orations and declamations were given and the school newspapers were read. The boys' paper was called "The Students' Miscellany" and dealt largely with politics and history. The girls' papers "Euphrosyne" and "Forest Leaf and Boquet," as an early student put it, "just fluttered around on gossamer wings." These Saturday exercises developed into the literary societies which later came to take such a large part in student life. Debating became the main interest of the men and a society called "The Young Mens' Debating Club of the Preparatory Department of Lawrence University" was formed. This ponderous name was soon dropped and the name "Amphicon" was adopted. From this developed the "Phoenix" literary society. The Young Mens' Literary Club was an off-shoot from the first society and in 1853 took upon itself the name "Philalathean."

The total attendance for the year 1850-'51 was ninety-eight; fifty-eight men and forty women. The smallness of the increase of attendance was occasioned by the failure of the wheat-crop for two successive years. Wheat was then the main agricultural product of Wisconsin. A failure of this crop meant a lack of specie among the farmers of the state. Many students found it impossible to return to school and many others found it impossible to begin.

The failure of the wheat-crop was also a cause of great embarrassment to the trustees. It became almost impossible to get money. Rev. Sampson, after making a tour of collection, wrote to Mr. Lawrence that he could collect hardly enough for traveling expenses. The school was already a thousand dollars in debt. A scheme to raise $100,000 by the scholarship plan was launched with some success. The plan was to sell 2000 scholarships at $50.00 each, giving the holder free tuition for an indefinite number of years to come. About half of the scholarships were sold but the results were disastrous. For many years the income of the school from tuitions was almost nothing. These scholarships were handed from friend to friend and relative to relative for fifty years. It has been only within the last decade that they have been almost nullified. The scholarships gave free tuition. To reduce its value the trustees were forced to reduce the tuition to but three dollars per semester and increase the incidental fees. Ex-president Mason said of the scholarships, "They cheapened education and bankrupted the college treasury."

During this year the seal of the college was struck. Mr. Sampson, writing to Mr. Lawrence gives the significance of its symbols. He says:

"We have got our seals and I will send you an impression on this paper. 'Light! more Light!' were the last words of Goethe to which 'veritas est lux' is a response. The book is placed in a cloud representing the darkness of the human mind, from which the light emanates and disperses the darkness." Upon this letter paper Mr. Sampson made a wax impression of the seal. It is the same as our present seal with the exception that the "1847" does not appear.

THE LAWE-MEADE TRACT CONTROVERSY.

At this time it is necessary to record at once the most interesting and the most regrettable part of the early history of the college. It will be remembered that Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Meade each donated to the Institute thirty-one acres of land.

It will also be remembered that the agreement between Mr. Reeder Smith and Mr. Lawrence was that Mr. Smith should buy land near the Institute and sell it again to desirable settlers, and that Mr. Smith should receive for this labor one-half of the money received from the sale of the lands. Mr. Lawrence, in giving Mr. Smith the right to buy lands in his name, said:

"The Institution grounds should be fifty acres in the more eligible situation."

When the committee on location asked inducements from various land-owners Mr. Lawe and Mr. Meade each agreed to give the school thirty-one acres of land. Mr. Whitney sold some land along the river to Mr. Smith for Mr. Lawrence, but this had no connection with the school. He, however, afterwards claimed that he received nothing for it and gave it with the understanding that it would be given to the Institute. His deed reads:

"It being expressly understood and agreed that this conveyance is made in consideration that the Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin, chartered by the legislature of said territory, shall be located upon or within one mile of said tract within one year of the date thereof."

It is evident that Mr. Whitney was merely speculating, knowing that a town would grow up about the school and that the remainder of his land would then become valuable.

The donations of Mr. Lawe and Mr. Meade, however, were given with the express understanding that the land should go to the school. It was claimed that Mr. Smith called the school a "manual training school" and that he said that the land was to be used by the school for farming purposes.

Documentary evidence convicts Mr. Smith in his actions concerning the tracts of Mr. Meade and Mr. Lawe. Evidence shows that he tried to get these gentlemen to deed their land directly to Mr. Lawrence instead of to the institute. Mr. Meade did this although his deed read:

"With the express understanding that the Lawrence Institute shall be located upon such land."

Mr. Smith by later manipulation had Mr. Meade insert in the receipt, "value of $125.00 to the Institution." This gave him grounds for the claim, which he made later, that Mr. Meade's donation was not land but $125.00, the land merely acting as payment in place of specie.

Mr. Lawe would not deed his gift to Mr. Lawrence but had it deeded to the Institute and had written in the deed, "For the benefit of Lawrence Institute." He, not wishing to be outdone in beneficence by Mr. Meade, put his valuation at $155.00. However, realizing that at some future time the land would be worth much more than that, he eliminated all designated money value "so that his friends and heirs would know the extent of his liberality in subsequent years."

PEABODY MUSIC HALL.

The Meade tract was deeded to Mr. Lawrence and he knew nothing of its having been given to the institution. Mr. Smith merely informed him that he had purchased a tract of land from Mr. Meade for $125.00. This amount was given to Mr. Smith by Mr. Lawrence presumably for Mr. Meade. Mr. Smith gave the $125.00 to the Institute, plotted the land, and began selling lots, half of the proceeds from the sales coming to himself.

Mr. Meade, seeing that the donation was being used for undesired ends, through Mr. Martin began to push claims to have the land deeded back to him. Mr. Lawe and Whitney began to do likewise concerning their donations. It began to be noised about that under the guise of speculating. Mr. Smith had bought land for $5.00 per acre and was now selling it for $25.00, $50.00 and $60.00 a lot. So great were Mr. Smith's profits that he later proposed to start another school at Marquette to boom the town, and said that he had an offer to do this from the Presbyterians.

The trustees of Lawrence Institute complained and sent Mr. Sampson to Boston to explain matters to Mr. Lawrence. Mr. Lawrence knew nothing of the Meade tract but said that in lieu of this loss he would transfer to the Institute certain blocks and lots in the village. Before he could do this Mr. Smith found out his intention and served an injunction on him, claiming that he had an agreement to sell all of Mr. Lawrence's land on shares, and that Mr. Lawrence had no right to dispose of any of it. However, Mr. Lawrence gave the deeds to the trustees of the Institute, but rather than have Mr. Lawrence subjected to a lawsuit they returned them to him.

The result was that in place of thirty-one acres in the heart of Appleton the school received the paltry sum of $125. As Mr. Lawe began to present claims for the return of his donation it was uncertain for a time whether the school would retain this tract. It was for this reason that Mr. Clark refused the presidency of the school, feeling that he could not afford to put his time into such an unsettled state of affairs.

Mr. Lawrence became discouraged with the whole situation. Since his first venture in Wisconsin affairs he had been in trouble. His land at Depere was always in jeopardy through the machinations of Mr. Williams or Mr. Eastman. Likewise was his land at Marquette near Green Lake. At Appleton he was constantly being called upon by his agents, Mr. Smith or Mr. Packard for money for property improvements, such as canals, mills, dams, plank-roads, etc. In all he laid out over $26,000.00 in Appleton outside of the school and received nothing in return. Not only this but he was assailed continually by letters of complaint from Wisconsin. He became utterly disgusted with the situation and in one letter speaks of the "Irkomeness of carrying on correspondence with Wisconsin." A few extracts from his letter will show his attitude toward his business here.

"I have sometimes thought I would never open nor answer any letter from that quarter, not that I have any reason to be otherwise than pleased with your correspondence, but I am sick, rather of everything that comes from there."

"I am sorry to receive so unfavorable an opinion as you give in regard to the management of the University property. I cannot believe that it is correct. You must remember that all the letters which I receive from Wisconsin are of the same tenor as yours of the 7th. and have been for 8 years past; every man denounces either the character or the management of his neighbor."

"The greater part of the rogues whom I have dealt with have been my correspondents in Wisconsin. The interest of the college I have at heart, and shall do my best to make it a respectable and useful institution."

"This constant outlay to make my land valuable is the most complete delusion that I ever experienced."

"Enclosed is the plank-road execution. You will find the rest of the $996 upon it, a villainous affair, not surpassed by any of the arts which have been used to get my money to Wisconsin during the past 7 years."

This feeling of discouragement toward Wisconsin never quite left Mr. Lawrence and traces of it are found in the letter of his late life. Both the Civil war and business anxieties helped to withdraw his interest from his "infant institution" but more vital than both of these was his lack of faith in the people of Wisconsin.

In Mr. Smith's favor it may be stated that his enemies did their best to blacken his character. It seems as though every rival land-owner was an enemy to Smith. Mr. Martin and Mr. Whitney had speculated in land about the Institute, plotting it off into lots and offering it for sale. But the land which Smith was selling was nearer to the school and consequently as long as Smith had land for sale no one cared to buy of other agents. Judge Howe of Green Bay and Mr. W. S. Wright, postmaster at Appleton, both gave it as their opinion that the chief object of complaint which Messrs. Martin, Meade, Whitney and Lawe had against Smith was that he was selling land and they were not. The whole affair is regrettable both from the standpoint of the welfare of the school and the character of the parties concerned.

THE FIRST PRESIDENT.

The school had grown to such prosperous dimensions that the trustees began to look about for a president. In a year or two there would be a number of men and women ready to enter regular college work. Mr. Sampson was merely the principal of the Academy and had no desire to be honored with the office of president of the university. How great is that man who can do his best faithfully without coveting the high honors which are often given to those who deserve them none the more! During the year of 1851 Mr. Sampson resigned on account of ill health. Professor Brooks took his place as acting-principal. The following year the trustees persuaded Mr. Sampson to return. At this Professor Brooks took offense, resigned his position and together with his brother started a rival school in the village. Mr. Sampson on the other hand took offense at nothing but what he considered dishonest or harmful to the school. He knew that he was not scholastically fitted to grace the office of president of the university and so set about helping to find a suitable man. On April 12, 1851 he wrote to Mr. Lawrence:

"I have been by the direction of the Board corresponding with Dr. Olin in reference to a president for the institution. He thinks that Mr. Newhall would do for the present if we design to continue the preparatory school only for a few years, and that he would ultimately make us a good President. And if we design to organize a college class or classes, he thinks that Rev. Davis Clark of New York, a man of talent and experience, (or) Professor Harmon or Mr. Johnson of Carlisle College, Pa., would either of these be first class men to conduct our educational interest in the Institution."

The necessity of electing a well-equipped man was felt by all. On August 3rd, 1847, the Rev. S. K. Lathrop of Boston wrote to Mr. Lawrence:

"The prosperity and progress of the contemplated institution in Wisconsin will depend essentially upon the character of its first president."

In 1850 Mr. Darling, who was president of the Board of Trustees, wrote to Mr. Lawrence that they had been considering the Rev. Richard S. Rust of Sambornton Bridge, N. H., who had been superintendent of the schools of N. H. and was at that time president of a N. H. seminary.

"Our man of course must come from the East if we have a man of reputation," he wrote. Mr. Darling was not a member of the Methodist church and was inclined to favor a man for president who was not of that communion.

At last the Reverend Davis H. Clark, D.D., afterward bishop, was elected to the presidency. He came and looked over the school and expressed himself to be pleased with it. However as the trouble over the Lawe tract was as yet not settled and the trustees did not know when it would be settled, he decided that things were in a too complicated condition for him to undertake their unraveling. His salary was to be $600.00 per year. After careful consideration he graciously declined the presidency.

The next election, Sept. 1, '52, resulted in the choice of Dr. Edward Cooke of Boston, who accepted the office. Dr. Cooke was a graduate of Wesleyan University and was at this time preaching in Boston. He was a man of stern and dignified manner, a firm Methodist, but not bigoted. To Mr. Lawrence he wrote:

"A sincere Methodist, I am a Christian first; and I am a Methodist only that I may be the better Christian and do the more good."

It was, indeed, a great undertaking for a polished eastern divine, "whose elegance was seldom equalled, and who seldom left his house without his cane, to accept the presidency of a wilderness school. Lawrence was an experiment in the wilds and the Easterner who knew of her existence at all knew little except that she was situated somewhere in the old fur region on the banks of a wild river. The financial agent of Lawrence in a speech in New Haven, Conn., informed his audience that Wisconsin "is peculiarly situated among the states of the Union, nearly in a direct line west from Massachusetts, and central among the Northern states."

About 9 months after his election Dr. Cooke arrived in Appleton to take charge of his new duties. His letter to Mr. Lawrence concerning his trip from Boston to Appleton is very interesting.

Appleton, Wis.

June 10, 1853.

A. A. Lawrence, Esq.

Dear Sir:

It is just four weeks today since I left Boston for this forest village in the far West. Spending a Sabbath in Buffalo and one also in Milwaukee on my way, I was nearly two weeks in reaching this place. Milwaukee is truly a wonderful city; it is scarcely fifteen years since the Indians held undisputed sway, and now it contains thirty thousand inhabitants and equals in beauty and magnificence almost any of our Eastern cities of the same population; there I met with many warm friends of the college—men of position and influence; also some of my former school-fellows who have risen to some distinction in the state—.

But perhaps you would like to know what are my first impressions of Wisconsin in general but of this Northern portion in particular. From Chicago at the extreme southern end of Lake Michigan I came by steamer as far north as Sheboygan, one hundred and fifty miles, touching at Waukegan, Racine, Kenosha, Milwaukee, Port Washington and one or two others whose names I do not remember, the most of which are large and beautiful towns or cities that would take by surprise a N. Englander unaccustomed to so rapid growth. From Sheboygan by stage forty miles over plank road and through a rolling country and in part what is called "Oak-Openings" brings you in a westerly direction to Fond du Lac at the head and most southern point of Lake Winnebago. Here you reach the Fox River Valley, and a most splendid valley it is too,—the lake itself being only an expansion of the river—and destined to become at no very remote period the most populous in the state. All around the shores of the lake are settlements and villages springing into life with a population of four thousand inhabitants—about half way down the lake on the west side is Oshkosh at the mouth of the Upper Fox, a growing village with near three thousand,—up the river a few miles is Berlin, an equally large and growing village. Following up the Upper Fox you pass through a beautiful country, becoming more or less populous and have a river navigable for steamers to within a mile of the Wisconsin—a large navigable river emptying into the Mississippi; this portage between the Fox and the Wisconsin is embraced in the contemplated improvements now partly completed. Emptying into the Fox a few miles north of Oshkosh is the Wolf River from a north-west direction; this is a larger stream than the Fox passing through (country) naturally rich in both agriculture and mineral wealth—is navigable for steamers for one hundred and fifty miles and its banks are being settled more or less all that distance. The natural outlet to all this country is down through Lake Winnebago. This brings us to the Lower Fox. At the outlet of the lake are Neenah and Menasha—rival towns of a thousand and more inhabitants on opposite sides of the river 36 miles from Fond du Lac. Five miles down the river is Appleton, the seat of the Lawrence University; this place like all the others, described above, has sprung into existence within the last five years. Appleton is situated upon the North bank of the Fox (the river runs nearly east and west here) on a table-land of partially oak-opening with now and then a high bluff projecting into the river and although it is of recent origin it is really a beautiful and growing town of, I judge, a thousand or twelve hundred inhabitants—some say fifteen hundred—I will write again in a few days entering more minutely into the affairs of the college.

Yours respectfully,

Edw. Cooke.

The twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth days of June, 1853, are memorable days in the history of the school. On the former date the corner-stone of Main Hall was laid and on the latter date the first president of the University was inaugurated. People assembled themselves from far and near to be present at these events. Enthusiasm ran high among the students and townspeople and the days were made occasions for numerous and spirited speeches. The dedication speech was made by the Reverend Alfred Bronson, famous missionary to the Northwest. This hardy circuit-rider traveled all the way from Prairie du Chien to Appleton on horse-back to deliver the address. The original address scribbled on small sheets of blue paper in his own handwriting is one of the historical treasures of the college. His oration reads in part:

"Mr. President, gentlemen of the Board, gentlemen of the faculty, students, and fellow citizens: We have assembled this day on the most important, solemn and interesting occasion that ever did or probably ever will occur in this northern portion of the young, prosperous and promising state of Wisconsin, to lay the corner-stone of a university. Others may be hereafter founded, but they will not be the first—. Others may rise from the prolific soil, and from the thousands who may inhabit this region, but no one can or will rise from the broken forest or have the difficulties to grapple with that have met the friends of this institution from the first step—the felling of the first tree and laying the first stone of this noble superstructure.——

"And now we have assembled to lay the corner-stone of a university building, which when finished, will compare favorably with any similar one in the United States if not in the world."

Here in the beautiful forest above the famous rapids of the river, before their natural loveliness had been obliterated by commercialism, it must have been an awe-inspiring sight to behold the erection of such a massive building, which at the time truly did compare favorably with anything in the United States. The Milwaukee Sentinel of February 15, 1856, says:

"This building is the largest and best of its kind in the West."

Even today for symmetry and massive beauty there is scarcely a building in the West to equal it. We do not claim that it is the largest in the West, or even in Wisconsin, yet an eternity of ages could not change it from being the best. To us it will always be the best because it is the most beloved.

It is not the writer's purpose to go into the history of the building of the Hall, as interesting as this would be. Suffice it to say that we are duly thankful that it was built of our native limestone instead of brick, which was the original intention of the builders. The founder of the school was a Bostonian, the new president was a Bostonian, the teachers and trustees looked to Boston as the dictator of the universe on all cultural questions, and Boston was then a city of red-brick houses and red-brick sidewalks. It was impossible to obtain good brick in the vicinity of Appleton and as a consequence the grandeur of the building was saved.

Having, so to speak, ushered the school through this embryonic period the writer feels that he has accompanied it as far as the purpose of this paper will allow. However, in his notes he finds some interesting extracts from letters depicting the early development of the city whose history has been so closely interwoven with that of the college. Believing these to be of general interest the writer adds a few paragraphs to a paper which has already rightly come to a close.

EARLY DAYS IN APPLETON.

"When the board commenced operations in Appleton there was not the house of a white man for many miles of the site," wrote Mr. Darling in 1849. Mr. Sampson, however, mentions a shanty-hotel about a mile from the present courthouse. This however may not have been there when the Board "started operations." But to the Indians and the French fur-trader the location was well known. The great rapids here were called by the French Les Grande Chute and were held in awe and superstitious fear by the Redman. Mr. Sampson came to the place by means of a dug-out canoe and making his way from the old Indian trail by the river to the level land upon the northern bluff with axe and saw started the "clearing" for the future college and city. However the elevation did not make the location an easy place on which to start a village. There were four deep ravines which required bridges to span them before the village could expand, and the ascent from the river, the main approach to the village, was steep and perilous. The agents of Mr. Lawrence, however, succeeded in overcoming these difficulties by a generous outlay of their employer's money.

As soon as it became known that an Eastern capitalist was going to start a school at Grand Chute there was an instant demand for property. On February 9th, 1848, Mr. Reader Smith wrote to Mr. Lawrence:

"College Avenue west of University Square is all wanted, or rather, the lots on either side are wanted for business, and none of the streets are entirely open but one."

And later he wrote:

"My surprise here is to find such a determination to settle the town before I can open streets to the lots. The only place for accommodating strangers in the town is called by the people 'The Lawrence Hotel'—The hotel is the best place in town! Its construction is of unplanned boards, one story, and covers considerable space. Mr. J. keeps it strictly on Temperance principles. The public room in it is devoted for the present on the Sabbath exclusively to religious services and the S. School. Rev. Mr. Sampson, who has removed his family to this place conducts the services on the Sabbath."

In the same year, 1849, Mr. Darling wrote to Mr. Lawrence:

"The town of Appleton is beginning to assume a position among western villages. Without a single inhabitant a year ago it now has some thirty families, and three taverns and one of them quite a magnificent county building. We have had one small steamer upon Lake Winnebago for some three years or more, and we have now two great boats in the building."

The following year Mr. N. P. Stevens wrote to Mr. Lawrence:

"Property is advancing in price and the present appearance of things would indicate that the population of about 300 would more than triple at the end of the present year."

And Mr. Smith again informed Mr. Lawrence:

"I have—located the following trades and professions: one blacksmith—his shop opened and he has all the work he can do; one drygoods merchant, who is now nearly ready to open his store; shoemaker (two) and their shops are raised this day; one book-merchant, he has commenced building; one wagon-maker is to erect his shop this winter. One building 22x32 feet for shops and post-office is nearly ready. I have located one millright and one lumber-merchant, also one cooper."

These extracts tell the story of a small western land-bloom in the wild and uncut woods of Northern Wisconsin. Facilities, however, were very poor as most of the provisions came by water and that not too frequently. The mail came once a week by boat from Green Bay. Lumber for building had to be hauled over-land some twenty miles until Mr. Lawrence advanced money to build a saw-mill in the new settlement.

During these early years there were three villages where the city of Appleton now is instead of one as might be supposed. West of Mr. Lawrence's land the land was owned by Mr. Martin. This was plotted off into a village called Martin, the streets of which were named after the members of Mr. Martin's family. The boundary street between this village and the village of Appleton was called North Division Street. The village of Appleton included most of the present business section of the city east of the "Chute" and the University grounds. To the east of the University grounds was a village named by Mr. Lawe Lawesburgh. The school property was separated from this village by Division Street, now called Union Street, the name being changed when the villages were united. In 1852 a map of the three villages was published, evidently for advertising purposes, showing the prospects of rapid development. Near the first dam is located a planing-mill and chair-factory, a sash and lath mill and chair factory, and two saw mills. Near the second dam and Appleton Street Bridge is located a grist-mill and edge tool factory, a planing mill and sash factory, and a saw mill. These industries of course were not all realities, but rather prospective works put in for advertising purposes. The following statement is found on the map:

This locality possesses the following requisites for a flourishing town, viz:

1. It is in a direct line between the port of Manitowoc on Lake Michigan, (to which place a plank road is now in progress of construction) and the nearest accessible point on the Wolf River, a stream navigable for steamboats.
2. It is the county-seat of Outagamie County.
3. It is the location of Lawrence University.
4. It is one of the most important navigable streams in the Western country.
5. Its hydraulic advantages are perhaps equal to any in the United States, the aggregate fall being nearly 40 ft.
6. It is the bosom of one of the most healthy and fertile countries on the world well adapted to either grain or grass, and rapidly filling up with hardy and industrious farmers.

Mr. Lawrence was not pleased that the village of Appleton should occupy such a small territory and brought his influence to bear upon the villages to incorporate into one calling it Appleton. In 1852 a petition was sent into the state legislature asking that the villages be made into one, which was granted and the three villages became one corporation under the name of Appleton with one thousand inhabitants. It will be noticed that the name, Appleton, was the maiden name of Mrs. Amos A. Lawrence. Mr. Samuel Appleton, her father, although a man of eighty-six years of age at this time took great interest in the new village bearing his name. In recognition of this he left to the college in his will $10,000 to found a library.

The college and the city sprang into existence almost simultaneously and received their names and impetus from practically the same source. Doubtless had the school never discovered this location a city would have grown above the rapids of the Fox at this point, but it would not have been Appleton either in name or composition. In 1847 Mr. Lawrence wrote to Mr. Smith that he considered a good neighborhood for the school imperative and in the following year he wrote, regarding those who might buy lots in the vicinity,

I consider the character of the buyer of more importance than the price."

In 1853 President Cooke wrote to Mr. Lawrence that the town "showed clearly New England tastes and predilections."

In the beginning the interests of the village and the school were one. May it always remain so! May the college serve the community and the community the college as was intended by the founders!

LAWRENCE IN 1850-1860.

My first acquaintance with Appleton and Lawrence was in the early Autumn of 1852, when, in company with my father, I paid it a brief visit. The fall term was just opened.

The "city" consisted of a clearing in the woods in the center of which stood a commodious frame building three stories high with cupalo, and a few buildings in a row, near by, called a street.

Study hours were over and the fellows were "kicking somewhat aimlessly"—as Washington Gladden puts it—a ball over the scarlet-gold carpeted campus that beautiful Indian summer evening. There were more trees than there was campus and it took a skilled runner to dodge them.

When the supper bell rang and every bat and ball dropped, I went, by invitation of Miss Crooker, the preceptress, with Miss "Lizz" Fisk, a student from our home town, to the dining hall.

The faculty at that time consisted of Rev. W. H. Sampson, president, James Phinney for mathematics, my cousin, R. O. Kellogg, just from Middeltown, Conn., English and the languages, and the above mentioned Miss Crooker, preceptress.

A year later, when I entered the institution as pupil, I would hardly have known the place. The carpet of golden leaves, with the trees that had furnished it had gone, and away to the East, nearly to Lawsburg—a part of "the city," was called, four square walls of stone and mortar had sprung up with scaffolding all about them.

It must have been very soon after this that the cap-stone of this new building was laid. I remember the ceremony. Dr. Edwin Cooke, who had taken the Rev. Sampson's place as president, with a handful of officials, zigzagged this way up the workmens' wheelbarrow path to the summit. The crowd was not permitted to follow. It would not have been safe. A student had fallen from that building a few weeks before, and barely escaped death. They reached the Northwest corner of those walls where the cap-stone was laid with God's grace unto it.

The Christmas holiday came in due time and a group of us were in the music room when Prof. Kellogg, "booted and spurred," came in to say good-bye before mounting his black pony, "Bullet" for a ride across country to his home in Milwaukee.

Several of the girls who must needs spend the two weeks vacation in the institution were discussing "ways and means" of spending it in one of the rooms and the rest of us were helping them; one girl announced that there was going to be a ball in town Christmas Eve, and she was going.

Some discussion followed, but she persisted. "It will be vacation and the institution can have nothing to say about it." I, who had been brought up to consider that a ball room was the gateway opening directly into that place to which none of us wish to go, lifted a silent prayer: "Oh God, don't let her go to that ball."

An hour later, my father came with a sleigh and took me home.

On my return in two weeks, the news monger of the hall, poured into my willing ears the items one by one, as she helped me off with my wraps, and I was trying to get my feet and fingers warm.

There had been a series of revival meetings held and a number had been converted; my "ball girl" among them; she had not been to that dance.

Our Steward's wife, Mrs. J. L. Blood had died. Prof. Sampson, who was a widower with three children, had been to New York City, where he had married a Miss Susan Field. "Why, why," I interrupted, "I have a cousin by that name." "Yes, I've heard it was some relative of yours," she added. A little later, in crossing the hall, I met Prof. Sampson, who, lifting his hat, called me "cousin." I replied in the most inappropriate words possible—probably—but stammered out a "thank you" to his invitation to "call soon." I was bashful then, oh so bashful! A wealth of friendship and kindness, was what I found in that home.

A notable person about the building at this time, was our "Prof. of Dust and Ashes," Edward Peterson. He was a tall well developed Norwegian who stood every day at one end of the A. B. C. class—there was a primary department at that time, taught by Miss Weston—and gave diligent heed to the primer and spelling book in study hours and wielded the broom and fire shovel and pulled on the bell rope the rest of the time.

One day as he was "mending the fire" in the chapel which occupied one half of the basement story of that building, he told me of his conversion.

Rev. Mr. Lathrop was holding revival services in Neenah which he attended, and became deeply convicted. While he was pondering in deep distress the evil one set up the old time argument with him that if he started and didn't "hold out" it would bring a reproach on the very cause he would like to help. Just then quite an elderly man arose and said that he became a Christian when a boy and had never been tempted to turn back as the way became brighter and brighter. This man, I afterwards learned, was my father. Peterson was on his feet, the minute the man sat down, asking for prayers. He obtained a clear witness of his acceptance with God and as clear a conviction that he must preach the gospel; hence he was here "working his way" through school.

The day he graduated, Prof. Cobleigh said to Rev. Lathrop, "You ought to be willing to preach the gospel for ten years, without a cent of pay, just for the privilege of having got that young man into the church." Prof. Cobleigh did not know that I had helped make the coat Peterson was wearing that day. But that is another story. Shall I tell it?

As the commencement at which Peterson graduated was approaching, Mrs. A. M. Linsley, one of my sisters, who lived near our father in Clayton, where Peterson had been preaching for two or three years, went among her neighbors, and solicited money enough to buy the broadcloth and trimmings for a coat. These were taken to an Appleton tailor who gladly contributed his service in cutting it. Another sister, the one with whom I was living,—I was teaching in Appleton—agreed to make it. She had worked at the tailor's trade years before and not forgotten what she knew. I volunteered to help. I did sew one or more seams with a "tailor's back stitch" that sister showed me, and felt very proud of it as he stood on that commencement platform. If any other alumnae of your famous institution can put up an equal story, please consider that I shake hands with her over the mountains and send me her name.

CHURCH

SMITH DORMITORY.

This last paragraph is scarcely worth printer's ink, but the story of Peterson's conversion and what Prof. Cobleigh said of him, I would like to have transmitted to the next generation, that they may be impressed with the value of "the word of their testimony." Had my father kept still in that meeting in Neenah, it might have been different with Peterson. When my father entered the glory land in 1885, Peterson had long been waiting for him. His days' work had been a very long one, Peterson's very short.

The first public exercise held in the then "new building," still "standing in its substantial dignity," was at the close of the June term in 1854. How it rained! The piano had to be taken from the old building to the new and professional piano-movers had not then been invented. The deed was accomplished with no perceptible injury to the instrument, on which I played "Spirit Waltz," and others more elaborate compositions, (but none sweeter), between the readings of essays by us girls, which constituted the ladies' exhibition. The gentlemen gave their orations in the evening. The chapel was unfinished. The seats consisted of a few chairs on the rostrum, and an abundance of long planks, laid on other planks set on edge. There were no backs, and my own, even at this distance, nearly catches a crick, as I think of it; and I recall that Miss Julia Colman—sister of the Rev. Henry—offered her fan to a gentleman for support, that evening, as the fellows were orating.

All that year those of us who were boarding in the institution had been expected to attend chapel at five thirty each morning. Prof. Kellogg conducted it. Do the best he could, our janitor could not always get the room comfortable, at that hour, and the costumes we appeared in, consisting of mufflers and shawls, cloaks or other wraps, were quite picturesque.

At the opening of the new year these morning prayers were changed to the new building at half past eight.

Prof. Kellogg did not return this year and his place was supplied by "Tutor" Jones. Prof. Mason took the mathematics that had been taught by the president after Mr. Phinney had dropped out. Our school was growing and Prof. Cobleigh was added to the faculty. We recited Greek to him.

Miss Adams had taken the place of Miss Camp, the music teacher, and she was followed by a spritly little body whose name escapes me; but not her songs; I hear them yet. Her sister and husband, Dr. and Mrs. Post, occupied apartments with her. Their Sabbath commenced at sun down on Friday.

Prof. and Mrs. Blair were new teachers in my third year. Mrs. Blair took the place of Amelia Dayton—afterwards the wife of Stevens, the Methodist historian—who had followed Miss Crocker, the first preceptress.

There were two literary societies extant when I first went to Lawrence. The..... and the Philo of the present day. The former, at that time, was controlled by a coterie of infidel inclined fellows while the other was definitely the opposite. From the ashes of that society the Phoenix arose; and it took years for that unsavory atmosphere to clear away; but, I am informed, that it has cleared away.

Of the ladies' side of the house, nothing very stable existed. A short lived "Clever Girls" society sprang up, of which I was a member. There was also another somewhat more enduring. We edited papers—in scrip—and held semi-"publics" in the old chapel. After our day "The girls we left behind us" essayed more pretentious affairs, even from the platform of the big chapel. One of these I attended and was proud of my younger sisters. The gentlemen were far more audacious and spoke louder and oftener.

Of the students of our decade, there were at least two who achieved reputations of which the rest were proud. It must have been in January, '55, that a young lady by the name of Marthy Dart, came among us from Baraboo, in company with Emma Maxwell, a student of the year before, and her brother James of the class of '59.

Miss Dart wore no badge of "genius" on her sleeve and no knowledge of her slumbering talent came to us. This young lady married Mr. Maxwell, the father of James and Emma and soon moved to Boulder, Colorado. In the early '70s Helen Hunt, afterwards Mrs. Jackson, was traveling in the far west picking up material for her "Remona" and writing charming letters of her travels for the papers.

In one of these letters she said: "I was sauntering down a street in Boulder, when my eye caught the sign 'Mrs. Maxwell's Animals,' swinging from a second story window. The day was hot, and from what I knew of stuffed animals, I doubted if it was worth while to climb those stairs; but I was needing material for my next letter and I went up.

"Astonishment beyond expression seized me as I entered that room! Grouped in picturesque naturalness, were animals and birds of every size and habit, from humming bird to condor (?)—I am quoting from memory—from dormouse to buffalo. I spent an hour in wondering admiration when a middle aged lady, in hunting costume came in. Hearing some one address her as Mrs. Maxwell, I approached and claimed an interview. 'Yes,' she replied, 'this is my own work; of course I have help in lifting the large pieces. No, I did not kill them all, but the most of them I shot or trapped. They are my pets taken in their native haunts.'

"How did you secure their charming naturalness so different from stuffed animals generally?" 'These are not stuffed animals,' she replied. 'It is this way. Before I remove the pelt, I study with great care just how it lies on the animal. I note where it has a drawn or tight appearance and where it is loose and wrinkled; then strip it from the body with care so I may not mutilate the carcas or twist it out of shape. From the carcas I make a plaster cast and cover it with the hide as nearly as possible as it was on the original animal.'

This letter attracted much attention. I read it with avidity, wondering if this Mrs. Maxwell was the Marthy Dart of school days. I learned that it was. At the Centennial in Philadelphia I doubt if any one thing attracted more attention than "Mrs. Maxwell's Animals."

Another student of our decade is the author of "The Tower of Saint Michel," that dramatic poem that has proved a companion piece to Mrs. Thorp's "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight." I heard it rendered a while ago at a high school function and was proud to tell the reader that I knew the author.

I cannot tell just the date when a new family moved into Appleton and their little girl in short dresses and her hair in braids entered our classes. We soon found she could beat us all in translation. Her mother had been her teacher.

What do you suppose Mollie does the hour before recitation? I asked a gentleman of the class. "Studies her lesson, I judge." "Indeed she does not; she plays with her doll."

Very early, she commenced writing, but essayed to hide her identity behind the non de plume "Lilly Lichen." Later she wrote under her full name, Mary A. Phinney; then it was changed to Humphrey and again to Stansbury as my well worn scrap book attests.

As my memory serves me, we of the '50s did not have all of the present day conveniences.

There were no electric lights and no one had "struck oil." Good old orthodox candles or camphene served us. There were no elevators or telephones but we did not miss them; and I never heard the most exacting student complain of their not being supplied; but we had heard of "dry wood" and wondered what it was like.

When young Smith of East Troy, broke up a chair in his sister Nancy's room to fix her fire, some of us said "Oh," but he only put in some emphatic words against the institution, as he continued to make kindling wood of it and was in no wise deterred by our exclamation points. Our mother Alma was very young then, and poor. She had no money to invest a year in advance, in cord wood that it might season and dry in the summer sun for our comfort in the future. She was not forehanded. Poor thing, how could she be! Her "ship" had not then arrived from "China" and she was "cutting her pattern according to her cloth," and remembering the bible injunction "take no thought for the morrow what wood ye shall burn." It was said that some of the teachers in those days apologized to their friends for not writing oftener because they could not get money enough to buy stamps. But stamps were three cents, then, you know.

The religious services of this time, besides the regular chapel and church exercises, consisted of a students' prayer meeting one evening each week and a class meeting at 9:00 A. M. on Sundays besides an annual day of "Fasting and prayer for Colleges and Schools." This occurred on the last Friday of February.

That first Commencement: I was in it and six others who knew more than I did; but how shall I write of it. We had been watching that event through an imaginary spy glass with the large end to our eyes, nearly four years; but now the glass was reversed and the much talked of was approaching.

There had been yearly affairs, called by that name but with no diplomas tied with blue ribbon to distribute; but this was different. Indeed, it was "A great event in American history," both to Appleton and to the seven.

There was a comet expected that spring and the wise-aces of the community kept it before the people. A rattled headed girl declared, "She didn't care if the comet did strike the earth if only it would wait till those girls had graduated."

The comet did not strike us; but a squall struck the little steamer plying on Lake Winnebago that had our diplomas aboard and sent them to the bottom. What could be done? The wheels of time would not stand still long enough for another order to be filled and forwarded from an Eastern city. A bright thought flashed into somebody's mind. Borrow old diplomas enough to make a show and "fool the audience." It was done. I received Prof. Cobleigh's sheepskin, gray with age but still tied with the once emaculate blue ribbon. The sermon with its smile, its bow and its thank you was soon over. It took no longer than a marriage ceremony after a four years' courtship. There was now nothing to be done but eat commencement dinner and attend the pres. levee; these were satisfactorily accomplished and we seven had—commenced—life.

When the preparations for these closing exercises were in progress the gentlemen held a meeting, in which one moved and another seconded the motion, that Mr. Atwell invite the president's daughter to accompany our class on that occasion; then the other three proceeded to cast lots as in Jonah's time. I fell to W. D. Story. In a letter to him a few months before his death, I assured him I had not forgotten the obligation I was under to him as my escort that day, though nearly three score years have passed.

Looking back over the mountains and over the years, I am forced to admit that ours was neither the largest or the wisest class, but we were the "First"; we led the procession of processions for Lawrence. What processions they have been, and are to be, you know better than I. But however much any or all of them may surpass us in numbers and in wisdom, this laurel of "First", of "Leader", no class can pluck from our brow.

And now, from away down on the sunny side of life, from the afternoon of years, with the wish that we meet and know each other by and by, I wave my greetings and adieu.

LAWRENCE IN 1860-1870.

The conditions in the college from 1860 to 1870 were interesting and varied. The first half of the period was a time of "sturm und drang", followed by five years of reconstruction. In the beginning the anti-slavery agitation was at its height and the echoes of that conflict were not unheard in the college halls. The sympathies of the faculty and students were unqualifiedly with the humanitarian movement for the abolition of slavery and it was the subject of many of the debates in the literary societies. Society in Wisconsin was still in its pioneer stage and household management crude and primitive. Coal had not come into use as a fuel and modern conveniences of all kinds were unknown.

One of the first things that caught my attention was a number of small piles of cordwood near the outbuildings back of the college. On inquiry I found these were remnants of fuel accumulated by students during the previous winter. The original plan of heating the huge college building by hot air furnaces had resulted in woeful failure and a return to the primitive method of box stoves for each room was the final resort. The students, or many of them, sawed and split their own wood which was carried up the two or three flights of stairs and stowed under the bed or piled along the partitioned wall of the fenced-off bed room. Preparation of the firewood for the ensuing week constituted our half holiday on Saturday afternoon. I have been told that there were instances where the stoves were utilized by students for what is now termed "light housekeeping," as a measure of economy.

In common with every other collegiate institution Lawrence suffered almost a complete collapse during the period from 1860 to 1865. Several of the professors entered the army, among them Professors Pletschke, Pomeroy, Fallows, and Davies. A number of students who had already entered the course went with them. Conditions in the state were such that there was little thought of pursuing higher education. Young women and younger brothers were compelled to stay on the farms and in the stores and shops, filling as well as might be places vacated by fathers and brothers at the war, so that the student supply grew more and more scant until the attendance was merely nominal and experienced teachers lacking.

Nor was the environment favorable to study and reflection for the few who were in attendance. Nearly all had some near and dear to them at the war and every rumor of a battle turned attention and thought southward, with a dread of that which might be, and often was. It was a period of unrest and apprehension. Classes were broken up and class cohesion and solidarity destroyed by frequent changes and withdrawals of teachers and students. The one overwhelming thought of the war and its attendant evils, reaching nearly every family and individual in the nation, made mental concentration on things which seemed light and trivial by comparison, an impossibility.

From 1865 to 1870, was what might be called the reconstruction period. In the Fall semester of the former year President Steele came to us. Peace had returned to the nation with the summer, and a large draft of young men who had been at the battle front made their appearance at college. The average age of the students was much higher than either before or since. Mustached and bearded men, bronzed by sun and wind, were common, and an atmosphere of manly dignity and earnestness prevailed. The masculine element was in a large majority in the college classes and the class of '70 had not a lady member. In all college functions, however, where the sexes paired off, they poached very successfully on their neighbors.

Some of these students had held responsible army commands and the military discipline to which all had been subjected, caused them to conform without question to the established rules of the college, and influenced the younger and more lively element in the same direction.

The social life in the college, especially in the dormitories, was what the students made it. There were none of the modern auxiliaries; no gymnasium, no ball clubs, yet we had athletics and ball games. There were no swimming tank or baths, but the river was handy and houses on the opposite shore had not then come into being, so we swam in the swift current at the expense of two lives lost by drowning.

PEABODY DORMITORY.

We got acquainted, chatted, laughed and told stories. There was little formality. Of course we naturally drifted into groups as we found those who were congenial. The musical department of the college was decidedly primitive. In 1865 it consisted of a single piano of ancient vintage in the ladies building, on which the professor or "professorin" gave lessons of a very primary character to pupils who practiced where and when they could. But among the students were many fine singers and though no vocal lessons were then given nor any formal musical organizations maintained we did not lack for music. The army boys naturally drifted together. There were many fine singers in their number and every one knew the stirring war songs of the period. Saturday evenings we would gather into one or another of the rooms and ere long some one would troll out

"We're tenting tonight on the old camp ground," and we were in for a night of enthusiastic sing-song.

There were some instrumentalists in our number and an impromptu orchestra was formed. It appeared at the public functions of the college on several occasions and was much appreciated. People were not quite so critical in those days.

Friday nights were the great events of those times. Then the only student bodies, the literary societies, met. The halls were packed to capacity with enthusiastic votaries of the Philalatheans or Phoenicians, as the case might be. Society feeling ran high, too high sometimes; for what should always be generous competition, closely approached open strife. It was the rule that in papers or debates every member must appear and give the best within him. Students of those days, in after years, declared they were as much benefitted by the society work as by the regular course.

The period was marked not only by reconstruction but by progress. In it was issued the first college paper, said also to be the first in the state. A new literary society was organized by the ladies, the Lawrean. The musical department was built up and extended. The reading room became such in fact as well as name.

During all this time there was a strong religious influence prevailing in the college. Prayer meetings and class meetings were largely attended and many manifestations of deep religious thought, feeling and purpose shown. This was specially marked during the years 1868-1870, and I think was the turning point with many students who later entered the ministry. Whatever the cause, the fact remains that a large proportion of those in attendance at that time chose the clerical profession as their life work.

This was fifty years ago. Times have changed and men have changed with them. New and stately buildings have arisen on the bare and uneven campus of our time. The present day student possesses and enjoys facilities unheard and undreamed of by the ancient of half a century ago. If added to these there is the deep earnestness of purpose, the sense of responsibility to God and his fellow men and the spirit of untiring labor which prevailed the student body during the decade considered, it should count for much. Is all that still there? Sometimes I doubt.

LAWRENCE IN 1870-1880.

When the request came from my Alma Mater for a brief review of college life at Lawrence in the "Seventies," I confess to having been somewhat appalled. The "Seventies" seem to be such a long distance away, and much water has run under the bridge since, fresh from a district school, I entered the preparatory department. I realize that with the present curriculum, it would take more than a year to fit a student in my state of unpreparedness for the college work; but with some extra studying in the long vacations I managed to get along without too much trouble. I had the natural advantage of learning easily, although I grieve to say that I never took any honors, except in the line of composition. Professor Jones described me very accurately, I think—considering the situation from this distance,—as a "spasmodic student." That is to say, I studied when I felt like it, and at other times—well, I didn't.

In spite of the awful example which this confession may set for the young student of today, I am still inclined to think that this was not so bad. As some one has aptly said the rate of progress is not of so much importance as the fact that you are headed in the right direction. The love of knowledge—which is not exactly the same thing as a love of study—I had before I went to Lawrence. That is, I had a lively curiosity concerning life and its manifold development and experiences. If anything interested me I needed no academic or other pressure to pursue my investigations. The two things for which I feel chiefly indebted to Lawrence are the aims toward which this curiosity concerning life were directed, and the abiding friendships which I formed there. You may think that I have summed up in a small compass the benefits of a college education, but I consider that no five years of my life have been more profitably employed.

Lawrence in the "Seventies" presented many points of contrast to the Lawrence of today. My knowledge of present day conditions is necessarily limited, but even so, I see much that is different from the college of my time. There was but one building in those days,—a building plain to bareness, and without anything within the gray walls to minister to the esthetic cravings of youth. The grounds were, to my fancy, more beautiful then than now, for they were far more extensive, and the great field in front, with its forty oaks, gave a sense of largeness and liberty that the present better-cared-for grounds lack. The campus compensated for much that was lacking inside.

There were no fraternities or sororities in the early days, and the social life was more simple, perhaps also more democratic than it is today. There was an annual "Walk Around," in the college chapel for the introduction of new students, varied occasionally by dressing in costume; there were the banquets given each winter by the Phoenix and Phillathean societies, which were the great social events of the year; there were occasional class parties and the festivities of Commencement Week. Most of the rest of the social life was centered about the weekly meetings of the literary societies, in their occasional socials and exhibitions. I will not attempt to deny the fact that there were numerous societies au deux, and Saturday excursions up the river and strolls to the beech woods and the sulphur spring on the other side of the river, or sleigh-rides to Neenah or Menasha in the winter. Even after the weekly prayer-meeting in Professor Foye's room (I wonder if they are attended so largely now?) there was always the pleasurable excitement in wondering if the right person might not be strolling your way after the service. Not that this possibility was the sole or even the principal reason for attending prayer-meeting, for the separate meetings on Sunday evenings had quite as large gatherings. In the "Seventies" there was a deep and wholly sincere religious feeling at Lawrence that left its impress upon the after lives of very many of us.

In speaking of the influence upon our characters for the better and higher things of life, I think that I ought to emphasize the personality of the corps of instructors of that period. There was probably no student of that time who was not glad to acknowledge, in later years if not at the time, the stimulating and elevating influence of Dr. Steele under whose supervision all of my student life was passed. There are also other teachers about whose names linger a fragrance of love and gratitude,—Professor Jones, Professor Foye, Professor Yocum, Miss Evans, Miss Hodgkins come first to mind, although there were others also whom I remember with respect and affection.

Reminiscences such as these have a pleasure, but they have also a tinge of sadness. Few of us, I fancy, would care to pass along that hopeful, care-free pathway again, and yet there is the inevitable feeling of regret that youth with its visions is forever past. To us who graduated in the "Seventies" the Great Adventure is already over. It is true that we may have still before us a half-score, or even a score of years of happy, and perhaps helpful activity; but the great things of our lives—the decisions that made us what we are or are not—were made long ago. Nothing that is vitally new can come to us. It is therefore with a feeling of deep gratitude that most, if not all, of us whose school-life ended at least thirty-five years ago, acknowledge our debt to the Lawrence of those days. Whatever of happiness, of success, of desire for service, and efficiency therein we have achieved, no small measure of credit is due to our Alma Mater. That her influence may continue as vital and far-reaching through all the years to come is the earnest wish of one of "the old girls."

LAWRENCE IN 1880-1890.

Looking back after thirty years and more the striking thing is that so much has come from so little, giving the highest testimony to the tremendous vitality of the Lawrence idea.

A very dear friend who had been very anxious to have me begin college life at another school came to visit me during my stay at Lawrence. I shall never forget the almost contemptuous look of disappointment as we came across Lawrence Street bridge and around the north side of the Old Main Hall. We halted a moment at the north west corner of the building and with a sweep of the hand toward the bare stone walls she said: "And THIS is the COLLEGE!" I was all but overwhelmed with chagrin.

Everything was surely on a small scale. The greater part of Lawrence in those days was in its departments other than collegiate. Most of the students were preparatory, academic, etc. In 1884 there were as I remember it four seniors, seven juniors, sixteen sophomores and about the same number of freshmen. The entire body of college students sat in a small section of chairs in the center of the old chapel.

Aside from the President's house the old Hall was indeed all there was to the college until the late eighties, Ormsby Hall appearing in 1889. Of scientific apparatus there was just enough so that we could not honestly say that there was none.

But I doubt if there has been at any time a greater devotion to Lawrence than during those years. We were one family and while we knew little of what goes to make up the outside activities of college life in this day we were intensely devoted to the welfare of the school and held its name in highest honor. Our social life was of the simplest sort. It all centered around the literary societies. Every one belonged to one or other of them. Everybody took part in the programs of which the debate was always the center, though we had some excellent music. The great occasions of the year were the joint meetings at the end of the terms when the boys and girls met together.

While our scholastic life was not broad it was intense and I remember Professor Lummis saying one time that he knew Harvard well and that Lawrence students did much more work than was done there.

Prof. N. M. Wheeler of blessed memory was with us a short time at that period and Dr. Raymond's Lawrence career was also wholly in that period.

We rejoice in the great things we see today and we believe that Lawrence's present greatness is largely the building upon the ideals which were easily apparent in the eighties.

LAWRENCE IN 1890-1900.

It does not seem possible it was so long ago, and I could hardly realize it until Dr. Plantz asked me for some impressions of Lawrence in the '90s. I am sure I do not feel that old, and anyone acquainted with my actions would say that I did not act that old, but if Doctor says so, it must be true.

The Fall in which I entered college, I remember, developed into one of the most beautiful autumns I ever saw. Heavy frosts in early September turned all the leaves to their brightest autumn colorings, the oaks were red, the maples yellow, and the other trees and shrubs were dressed in their gayest. There were many more trees along the banks of the river then than now, for that was before the woods had been cut away and the Fox was one bouquet from Strobies Island to Kimberly.

Besides the President's house, there were but two buildings on the campus in use, the Main Hall and Ormsby Hall. The Observatory was being built, but had not yet been completed, and the other structures now gracing the campus had not then been thought of. During Indian Summer, the boys carried the long tube of the telescope up into the Observatory, and Professor Underwood especially honored me by allowing me to carry the object lens. No further buildings were erected during my course. Even the Main Hall had been allowed to stand for fifty years in an unoccupied state, the large porticoes at the sides and ends were not then in place. It was just about the period when the building ceased to be used for dormitory purposes. There were still some rooms fitted for dormitories on the second floor, and on the third floor they were actually used for living rooms by the boys who had charge of the buildings.

Among my first impressions of Appleton was a distinct disappointment over the electric street-cars. I had seen horse-cars in Milwaukee and other cities, but had never seen one propelled by electricity until I went to Appleton. My youthful mind had developed an imaginary picture of a swift and noiseless coach darting along the street, propelled by lightning, and I looked forward with anticipated pleasure to the realization of my dream. What was my disappointment, when, standing on the corner of College Avenue, I heard a sound as of someone rolling up the street an empty steam boiler filed with old castings, and around the corner slowly crept a dinky little car, bobbing and rattling up the street scarcely faster than a boy could walk. One of our modern street-cars might have more nearly met my anticipation, but what I actually saw was a distinct disappointment.

Another disillusionment was when I learned that college students, yes and would you believe it? even college professors, were simply mortal men, subject to the same frailties as ordinary human beings. I was really disappointed in the personal of the student body at Lawrence when I first entered school. They did not come up to my hopes. They were neither as smart, nor as good, nor as beautiful as what I had dreamed they were going to be. Looking back upon them from a perspective of twenty years, I can now see that they were a very fine class of young people. In fact, the thing which impresses me most, that which stands out as unique in Lawrence life during the four years when I was in college, is the absolute democracy of the school. I entered Lawrence with $40.00 in my pocket. I never asked my widowed mother for a cent's worth of assistance while I was in school. I earned my way mostly by manual labor, and yet after I became acquainted I know of no time when I could not have braced up and asked any girl in college to go to any college function, and barring purely personal reasons, with a good prospect of being accepted. A boy could saw wood all day Saturday, could wash his face, black his shoes, and in the evening escort the most stylish girl in school to a social or reception, with perfect sang-froid. If a boy behaved himself, was willing to work, and had a reasonable amount of brains, he was welcomed anywhere in college. I have never known another place where one was estimated so purely for his true worth as he was at Lawrence. There were no fraternities, in fact they were taboo. I don't know that they have affected the democracy of the institution, but the fear that they would do so had up to my day kept them out. There had always been, during my regime, an intense rivalry among the four literary societies—the Philalatheans and their sisters, the Athenas, the Phoenicians and their sisters, the Lawrians. Every new boy or girl who was in earnest and wanted to make the most of himself or herself, was eagerly contended for by these societies and one who showed some prospect of genius as a debater, a student, a musician, or an athlete, was especially sought after. The factional contention had become so strong that before I came the boys had stipulated that the new students should be allowed ten weeks in which to choose the society they wished. In place of relieving the pressure, I am inclined to think this simply extended it for a contest of ten weeks duration, and the Fall term was always enlivened by the excitement over gaining new members for the respective societies.

There were, as I remember, eight faculty members who sat upon the rostrum at chapel meetings. These meetings were then at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Dr. Gallagher was President, a very precise man of unbending formality, a polished Puritan, with absolutely no tact in managing boys. I am really ashamed when I think back upon the many tricks we put over on the Doctor by means of the simplest ruses.

There was Dr. Lummis, the beloved of all the students, a man of wide reading and education, and a phenomenal memory, the last resort for authority in any disputed question of scholarship. He occupied the chair of Greek, which is now filled by Gus Trevor. Gus entered school the same Fall that I did, and if anyone had seen that little, bashful, bow-legged country boy in his junior preparatory year, they never would have prophesied what a blossom that bud contained.

Professor Cramer, in the natural science, gave me one of my earliest, and, therefore, most unadulterated inspirations. His class in Zoology was a revelation to me. It was from him I first learned of such wonderful ideas as contained in the theory of evolution, and I have not since enjoyed work more than I did in his class.

Professor Thomas E. Will came to Lawrence the same Fall that I entered, and occupied the newly created chair of history and political science. He was a remarkably capable teacher, inspiring his students to individual effort for the love of the work, rather than cramming them with facts. His propagandist spirit, however, in favor of the single tax theory affronted the conservative element in the faculty and the board of trustees and, during my sophomore and junior years, nearly caused a schism in the student body and faculty of the school. I believe his work in European History helped me as much as anything I took in school.

Professor Jones, in the Latin Department, was the Senior member of the faculty, having taught consecutively for more than forty years at Lawrence. A gruff, stern, old-fashioned man, he had a large heart, and when I was not scrapping with him I was mostly chumming with him, and he was excellent at either occupation.

Professor Foye, in the chemistry department, I had little work under.

Miss Perley, the preceptress and a teacher in English, was particularly nice to me, and was one of the faculty members who has left a permanent impression on my character. Those who know both of us, please do not lay this up against Miss Perley.

Miss Woodhead, the other lady member of the faculty, was a universal favorite of all the boys, and deservedly so, and more than one left school the better for having known her.

Miss Smith was then, as now, I believe, librarian, and Professor Sylvester the head of the music department.

In my second year I got a job in the college, taking care of the halls, stairways, lights, ringing the big bell, and having charge of the keys. Ira Allen, a boy from my home town, had the other college job and we moved into the main hall, my room being the southeast corner room on the third floor, and the high jinks carried on there would fill a big book, and did fill pages in the Lawrentian, where our panegyrists more than once broke into verse in describing the times had there. I held this job and room until I graduated, and many of the happiest remembrances of my life are connected with it. The period in which I was at Lawrence was the period of financial depression, the panic of '93 happening during that time. The school was very hard up, but as boys, stringency in money did not affect us as much as it would now, as men. I, for one, was used to it, having always had to scratch for my own money, and the majority of boys were like me in that respect.

I will end by recalling how, just before I came West, I went back to make a farewell call to the old school. The buildings were all there, of course there were some new ones, then the campus was much the same as when I had known it, and even some members of the faculty remained, but the student body whom I had known so well, the boys and girls with whom I had been so familiar, were all gone, and their places were filled with strangers, other boys and girls who did not know me and had never heard of me. Each turn it seemed to me I ought to meet with faces of the old students, but I met, instead, strangers, and I left with a cruel homesickness in my heart. I have often dreamed of Lawrence and of being back there as a student. In the dream I was never quite as alien as in reality when I found myself a stranger among old familiar places where I had once been so much at home.

NED RONEY, '95.

LAWRENCE IN 1900-1910.

And I am told to reminiscent—more than that, to expose to the gaze of the indifferent alumni of other generations, the memories of those days that stand out rich in their idealism and superb in the lazy luxuriance of their irresponsibility. Needless to say, it is with a feeling of reluctance that I open the door to the land of bye-gone days—days that perchance seem more remote now than they will a generation hence. But with a heart determined to respond to the call, and a mind alive to the incidents the memory of which I had tucked carefully away, I put aside my work and travel back to the college campus.

As I approach my destination memories come flooding back to me. At the Junction I recall how on my first journey the jaunty "tin soldier," as he was dubbed—his name escapes me now—boarded the train to dispense general information to all new-comers, incidentally extending his hand for their checks that he might rustle the baggage to its proper abiding place; and how, as the train drew into Appleton, I carefully pinned on the lapel of my first real suit the ribbon that was to proclaim me a new student—all unconscious that the badge was entirely superfluous!

The sight of Ormsby brings back varied memories of the first homesick weeks; of the mid-night spreads—so often interrupted by an uninvited chaperone; of the dread of the closed door, as homeward bound from an escapade, we heard the town clock strike the fatal hour; and of the burning of the nocturnal candle over belated essays and neglected Latin.

And dear old Main Hall! As I pass through its corridors I find myself watching expectantly for familiar faces, all unconsciously bending my steps toward the door of the room whither I was wont to find the solution of my perplexing problems—to the woman whose understanding heart, whose sweet humanity guided me through the maze of college life. I reach the door, but I cannot enter, for I know that behind it there will no longer greet me the face I loved. For a moment I rebel at the thought; but I know that she would not have it so—and I pass up the winding stairs to other memories.

As I slip into chapel and hear the strains of "Joy To The World," I recall the wave of homesickness that swept over me at my first memorable chapel service, when at the singing of this same hymn I gazed into the what then seemed coldy intellectual faces of the faculty and at the patronizing upper-classmen, who appeared to wonder—if they noticed me at all—how one who had grown no larger and looked no wiser had gained entrance to these learned portals. But, now indeed am I made aware that the years that have passed have robbed us, for no longer do I see the faces of Dr. Lummis, Miss Corkhill, Miss DeGreen, Rabbi Gerechter, Dr. Harris and Miss Carter. Never more fully than now have I appreciated how the lives of those who were at once instructors and friends revealed to us the beauty of life, and instilled in us ideals that even now remain unchanged. But as I see again Dr. Plantz—stern as he appears in his little black cap, though well I know the kindly glint in his eye—tap on the pulpit for silence; as I hear once more Dr. Naylor leading the vibrant student voices in song; as I watch through the corner of my eye Prof. Farley gazing meditatively out of the window during devotions, and Miss Smith, the same gentle reminder, I fancy, of the forgotten library book—I know that the present student body, too, is fortunate; and it seems but yesterday since, clad in cap and gown, I slid into my seat in the front row alongside of Shorty Sherger, the college clown. In a moment I am dreaming of the all college receptions where our feet fairly ached to dance but had to primly walk; of the class oratoricals—that some of us at times failed to attend; of the mass meetings and the emptying of our purses in response to "Dad" Peifer's enthusiastic appeal to buy a holiday; of the climbing of the rickety ladder by candle light for the Senior spread in the dome; of the class play rehearsals where we taxed the long-suffering patience of Prof. Garnes.

With a start I realize that the service is over. Slowly I pass down to the lower hall, and out onto the campus where the sight of the river, gleaming in the reflection of the May sun, reminds me of the hours I spent upon it—of the wholesome pleasure found in down-river spreads, out-to-the-lake stunts and Clifton yacht rides. Down the street I wend my way, mindful of the gratitude that we as students owed to the townspeople who in kind hospitality threw open their homes to us, we in the heedlessness of youth accepting it, I fear, without due appreciation.

As I journey home the memories of those days that are gone forever surge through my mind, and I nigh repent that I have unlocked them from their hiding place. But directly there comes to me the words once taught me by a loved instructor:

"That time is passed,
And all its aching joys are now no more
And all its dizzy raptures. Not for this
Faint I, nor mourn; other gifts
Have followed; for such loss, I would believe Abundant recompense."

Well I know their wisdom; well I know that those years at Lawrence were priceless not only for the pure joyousness and mental growth they held, but because they planted the seeds that would later yield a breadth of vision, a saneness of mind, a confidence in self and in humanity, which should have made us—if we have been true to our faith—of some small service in this world.

THE LAWRENCE OF TODAY.

SCHOLASTIC DEVELOPMENT OF LAWRENCE.

The material development of Lawrence, during the past decade, has been, indeed, most gratifying. Buildings, endowment, and equipment are the sine qua non for any successful college. The final criterion of its efficiency, however, is the quality of its faculty, and the breadth and thoroughness of its scholastic work. As judged by this standard, the advance of Lawrence since 1905 is fully up to her material progress.

The number of heads of departments has increased from sixteen to twenty-three. Ten years ago, only one department had the assistance of a regular instructor. Today, several of the departments are so manned, and the addition of new instructors is contemplated for the immediate future. For example, in 1905, all the work in English language and literature was done by one professor. There are now two full professors, and two instructors.

There has also been a marked advance in the scholastic preparation of the faculty. The number holding the doctorate from reputable universities has more than trebled in the ten years, now representing nearly two thirds of the heads of departments. The others have all had two or more years of graduate study. They are specialists, awake to the new developments in method of research in their respective fields. They are members of the learned societies in arts and science, and appear occasionally on the programs.

The instruction is far more efficient and exacting than it was ten years ago. It shows a more scholarly grasp of the subjects taught, and a more practical consideration for the needs of the student. Lawrence has ceased to graduate students on a merely passing record. Graduation is now impossible unless one has gained a grade of eighty per cent or above in at least two fifths of his hours. The work in the laboratory sciences has greatly developed in thoroughness and extent, especially in Biology, Geology, and Psychology. A few years ago, Lawrence had practically no experimental work in Psychology. Today the department has an extensive and thoroughly up-to-date laboratory equipment. The whole matter of library assignments and other collateral work is far less chaotic than formerly. The aim of such assignments is much more clear and definite, and the work is more thoroughly supervised.

Lawrence pays much more attention to the science of education, and to practical efficiency in teaching than formerly. The department of Psychology has markedly developed, as noted above, a strong department of Education has been added; departmental teachers' courses are now offered in most departments, and in general, the whole spirit and aim of the collegiate instruction reveals a greater regard for the accepted principles of modern Psychology and Education.

The result of the progress in this respect is very evident in the changed relation of Lawrence to the high-schools of the state. Ten years ago, the influence of Lawrence in Wisconsin secondary education was slight. The Lawrence alumni, who held positions in the high-schools of the state were few in number. Today our graduates hold many important principalships and positions in most of the leading high-schools. In this regard, Lawrence stands second only to the State University.

As a result of the system of faculty student advisers, the professors are brought into closer personal touch with the individual students than they were even in the earlier days of small things. They enter more sympathetically into the needs and collegiate interests of the students, and are more human, despite their more exact scholarship. A decade ago, it was a rare thing for a Lawrence professor to encourage a student to undertake graduate work in a university. It has now become a commonplace for each professor to inspire some of the brighter and more ambitious students in his department to continue their studies after graduation. Substantial fellowships and scholarships are secured for them. They can gain their Master's degree in any of the best universities of the West by one year of graduate study, and their excellent work, notably in the universities of Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Illinois, Chicago, Minnesota, and Northwestern, has stamped Lawrence as one of the efficient colleges of the country. The record of Lawrence students in regard to the Rhodes Scholarship has also been much better than that of any other Wisconsin college. Lawrence has never yet lacked a candidate for the honor. Only one has ever failed to pass the examination. Two have been elected to the scholarship, one of whom so distinguished himself as to be elected to the department of Anthropology at Harvard, on his return from Oxford.

Another result of the more direct interest of the professors in the advancement of their students is the Latin League of Wisconsin colleges, founded through the untiring efforts of our professor of Latin, Dr. Wright. In the annual competitive examinations, held under the auspices of this league, Lawrence students have carried off the cup for two consecutive years, and last year, they made a sweep of all the prizes.

In this connection may also be mentioned the great advance in forensic interests. In oratory, Lawrence has become a worthy competitor with any of the colleges in the oratorical association, and in debate she has climbed to the top of the list. As many men entered the debate tryouts this year as turned out for foot-ball. Lawrence has won four-fifths of her regular intercollegiate debates for the past three years, and her Freshman teams have won both sides of the question from Beloit and Ripon for three successive years. The old days of provincialism have past. Frequent investigations are made both by individuals and by faculty committees into the educational methods and curricula of other reputable institutions. Administrative and educational problems are constantly under consideration by the faculty, with a view to standardizing the work of Lawrence with that of the most efficient colleges in the country. There is a standing committee on curriculum, which takes the lead, together with the President, in such progressive measures.

The development of the curriculum during the past decade is thus fully as notable as the advance in the number, preparation, and scholastic efficiency of the faculty. The number of courses offered has greatly increased. The evils of a too free election have been largely obviated by a proper balance of requirements, by the major and minor, and by the group system. Thereby a series of suggestive courses of properly correlated studies is outlined as a guide to the student's choice. These means are made more practical by a system of faculty student advisers. Certain professors have entire supervision over the choice of studies and scholastic work of the students, each having a division of about thirty. This system has greatly developed in efficiency and significance during the past few years.

President Wilson named one of the chief problems of the modern college in his complaint that "the side-shows were in danger of swallowing up the circus." This difficulty is being partly met at Lawrence by a system, which standardizes all extra-curricular student activities, and permits each student to have only a certain number of units, depending upon his grades and the extent of his regular college work.

During the past ten years, Lawrence has greatly clarified her educational ideals, and has set for herself a definite goal. She has sloughed off the old inapt name of "university," and has taken on the name that properly characterizes her in the educational world, as a college of liberal arts. In accord with this, the extraneous institutions, such as the academy, the school of commerce and the school of expression, which hampered her proper development as a first-class college, have been dropped.

It requires only a very cursory comparison of the Lawrence bulletins of 1905 and 1915 to observe the great advance in definiteness, clearness of statement, system, scholarly grasp, and practical appreciation of student needs. The annual catalog has lost its old diffuseness and useless padding, and is now suggestive of a college that has become conscious of a clear and definite educational aim.

During the past few years, there have been signal evidences that Lawrence is realizing this aim to become one of the efficient colleges of the country. She was one of the first to be accepted by the Carnegie Foundation. She was one of the first to receive assistance from General Educational Board of New York. She is among the 117 colleges, universities, and technical-schools of the country, chosen by the United States commissioner of education, whose diplomas will be accepted as certificates of admission to graduate work in the best German universities. She has been honored with a charter of the honorary forensic fraternity of Tau Kappa Alpha. She has been admitted to membership in the Association of Collegiate Alumnae. Above all, she has been granted a charter of the honorary scholastic fraternity of Phi Beta Kappa, a clear recognition of her standing as an educational institution of the first rank. In the light of such a record of advancement, during the past decade, we may confidently prophesy for our Alma Mater a continued development in all that comprises the highest scholastic efficiency.

ATHLETICS AT LAWRENCE.

A thorough development of muscular and nerve control is fundamental to the highest type of mental and spiritual life. Dr. G. Stanley Hall in his well known article on moral education and will training points out the immense role that motor training has occupied in will growth. Indeed the development of motor control and excellence and fineness of muscular co-ordination appears invariably associated with a high potential of intelligence. Good health, proper hygiene, go far to make a sunny-tempered optimistic human.

Modern education as instanced in the summer play-ground and manual training movements, feels the importance of physical training as never before. The body is no longer a house of clay, but a vital part of the efficient and happy man.

College athletics of some form, therefore, should play a vital part in every college curriculum.

What part has athletic training played at Lawrence during the last ten or dozen years?

Before the year 1900 Lawrence owned no gymnasium, no athletic grounds, employed no coach, was without a physical director or a woman instructor in physical training, and recognized no periods for physical training in her curriculum. Before that date, athletics at Lawrence was an unsystematic, spontaneous student activity. And yet it is remarkable, when one looks up the history of athletics at Lawrence, to see the superior athletic ability shown before 1900 especially between the years 1894-1900. However athletics was hardly looked upon as a function of the college proper. We were under the spell of the older type of thought.

The years 1900-1901 may be said to mark the beginning of a new athletic dynasty, for it was during these two years that Lawrence athletic field was purchased and Alexander Gymnasium was erected. The year 1901-2 was also the year of Lawrence's first permanent athletic trainer and coach, Mr. Francis Brigham, and his immediate successors, together with the continuous work of two members of the faculty, that Lawrence was placed on her present foundation of athletic prosperity.

Today Lawrence employs a foot-ball coach, an in-door physical trainer of men, and a woman instructor for women. Our gymnasium equipment is first-class and physical training has a place in the college curriculum.

However, it would be untrue to imply that we now have all that is needed. With the growth of the school, has come a more urgent call, a greater need for a physician director, for additional instructors, and a new and very much larger gymnasium for men, so that the whole student body may have adequate physical training or exercise every week day.

Before 1900 the chief athletic interests were foot-ball, track and field athletics and baseball, but as has been mentioned, these were carried on in a sporadic and unsystematic fashion.

Since then, the old interest in baseball has largely disappeared but the forms of athletic interest have greatly multiplied. Foot-ball, track and field athletics, basket-ball unheard of in the olden days, wrestling, boxing, tennis, systematic calisthenics and in-door games for both men and women, in-door track training, the pentathlon, the inter-scholastic high school meet, and the inter-collegiate athletic contests with the five colleges of Wisconsin and the universities of Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Chicago have enlarged the horizon of interest of the present day Lawrence athlete.

Along with the increase in activities, has come better organization, better training, a large number of student committees, and rewards for achievement; rewards which the men of former days longed for in vain.

From 1900 up to 1908 Lawrence was working for a reputation. She desired to be known, hence there existed an overmastering wish to play big institutions. These were the years when we played Notre Dame, St. Louis, Northwestern at Evanston, North Dakota Agricultural, Chicago, Wisconsin, and Minnesota. This desire for recognition is revealed in one of the Ariels of that period. In a review of intense satisfaction and self laudation one reads: "No longer are our contests confined to local schools but some of the larger universities have found these teams no mean antagonists on the athletic field." The foot-ball record of these early years, say from 1902-1905, was indeed a splendid one, for out of 25 games played, Lawrence won 20 and lost only to Chicago, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Today, however, Lawrence is content largely to confine her athletic activities to contests between first-class colleges. Here her position for the greater share of twelve years has been unrivaled. In basket-ball, for the last five years Lawrence has held practically every year the position of either first or second among the colleges of Wisconsin. Again, in track and field contests she has won fully ninety per cent of the inter-collegiate meets. In foot-ball Lawrence has held the state championship for five consecutive years, while out of 14 years, from 1901 to 1915 inclusive, she has won ten different years against all the colleges played. Never, since 1902 when we first beat Beloit, has Beloit beaten us in foot-ball, although since then, we have contested on the gridiron with her every fall. Before 1902 Lawrence set as an ideal to be won the conquering of Beloit. Today Lawrence has come to look back at that youthful ideal as an ambition of the old days.

In all lines of work Lawrence has gained the confidence of maturity and achievement. Indeed today she feels that she has the right to be called one of the best colleges of the country. This self possession is a most important asset to any growing institution for not until such confidence arises, does full self respect and loyalty blossom forth.

It will be interesting to old Lawrence men to have some idea as to what years were most productive of records and in what years were won the best records from 1894 to 1915.

THE SOCIAL LIFE AT LAWRENCE.

It has been said many times in many various ways that the great advantage of a small college over the large university is that the small college affords opportunity for development along all lines of interest. This is well illustrated in the social life at Lawrence. Here, opportunity for wholesome recreation is given in a way which is peculiar to the institution.

This fact is particularly impressed upon any alumnus who talks with graduates of other schools. Lawrentians have reason to be proud of the democracy existing at Lawrence.

Throughout the last decade, the big social events of each college year have remained practically the same. The Walk-a-Round, the Hallowe'en party, the party given on Washington's birthday and the May Day festivities interested the student body in 1915 as much as they did in 1905.

The only all-college affair of social interest which has changed has been the celebration of the annual autumn scrap between the Freshmen and the Sophomores. After the scrap was made into a series of athletic events, supervised by the upper classmen, on a holiday granted by the faculty, the celebration took place at Potato Point for several years. Now, however, the student body usually goes to Clifton for this event. Of late years, it has become customary to have an all-college yacht ride to Clifton in the spring, also.

Class parties are as much in vogue at Lawrence as of yore. The Women's Literary Societies are true to tradition and give several functions each year. The Men's Literary Societies are not as active as they used to be, but they are energetic enough to entertain occasionally.

The school has increased greatly in enrollment during the last ten years. Since better times are had in small groups than in large ones, the fraternities and sororities have a place in the social life at Lawrence. Consequently, it has become customary for these organizations to give, collectively and individually, enjoyable parties every year. The Lawrence Union, a society made up of those who do not care to affiliate themselves with secret societies, entertains frequently.

The various dormitories remain, as always, centers of much enjoyable social intercourse. More formal affairs are given in late years. The Ormsby At Home in the fall and the Brokaw banquet in the spring are especially worthy of mention.

Some changes have taken place in the manner of entertainment. Formal parties now equal, if they do not outnumber, the informal ones given. This seems to be an improvement, as the students thereby receive more of the social training necessary for them to have in our modern life. The social affairs are more elaborate now though they are not essentially more costly. The undergraduates seem to be more clever than of old. Any alumnus would be astonished if he took the time to investigate, to find the unusual executive ability and excellent management manifested on the part of the students.

But while changes are likely to confuse an alumnus at times, it is a comfort to know that the spirit at Lawrence remains the same. No snobbishness exists consciously. Instead, a fine spirit of true kindness and of splendid fellowship prevails.

GEORGIA HUMPHREY, 1912.

FRATERNITIES AND SORORITIES AT LAWRENCE.

Should any one ask, What is a fraternity? we would reply: It is a group of people supposed especially to like one another, a group that aims to foster that like by living together and enjoying common privileges and forms.

Fraternities are as old as the human race. The clan, the guild, the community boosters club, the church, the marriage custom all have features characteristic of fraternity life. So long as common interests and mutual enjoyment of personalities cement companionship, fraternities will be a feature in human life.

A fraternity man is not necessarily aristocratically inclined, Philistines to the contrary, any more than is a man who chooses a maiden as the one of all maidens to be his life boon companion. Fraternities are human, richly human, and so rise or fall just as other organizations do, with the rise or fall of the ideals of their members. A fraternity may become a fine spiritual force in a college or it may easily become the reverse. We quote the ideals of youth, the ideals of a Lawrence Fraternity which has been a splendid power in college life, as follows: "The establishment of a spirit of brotherhood among its members, the attainment of a refined social life, the encouragement of excellence in scholarship, the promotion of a democratic spirit through Lawrence College, and the attainment of a high moral character."

Including honorary societies, Lawrence has fourteen fraternities and sororities. Of these, four are honorary. Fraternities were first established at Lawrence in 1897. The Theta Phi local fraternity was organized at that date and is thus the oldest fraternity in college.

Prior to 1897 the impulse toward fraternity life of the student body was absorbed by the four literary societies, Philalathean, Pheonix, Athena, and Lawrean. These societies, though literary in purpose, were practically fraternities. Rivalry was intense and feelings ran high at the time for pledging. The students of the old societies felt that they could tell a prospective member of an opposing society merely by the cut of his face. It is doubtful if in those days the present fraternities could have lived, for the old societies supplied all the demands of the then small group of students.

With the growth of the student body intimate acquaintance by each of all the student body ceased. This meant that intimacy henceforth would take on the form of college groups. About 1904 the character of our student body began to change and this change has been more marked with the passing years. The graduates of our high schools demanded more social life and varied extra curricular activities in the form of organized athletics, multiple student interests, committees and organizations. Fraternities were an expression of this demand for a more social life. Indeed we may say the modern student is not the individualist of former days. Again the debate function of the old literary societies was undermined by the development of class instruction in debating, while the literary and oratorical enthusiasm so marked in the old days, was drafted off into a department of systematic instruction in oratory and oration writing. Likewise the interests in pure literature were largely absorbed by expanding departments of literature. Finally, the old parliamentary drill where the boys would tussle over points of order until the wee hours of morning has had to compete with a systematic course on parliamentary procedure. Thus the various functions of the old societies have been taken up by other organizations of the college.

As a consequence, from about 1903 the process of evaporation has left the old societies with a mere residue of their former substance. Indeed, the Phoenix and Lawrean societies seem to have taken on the form of spirit phenomena at a spiritualistic seance. Sometimes at the command of some medium they suddenly materialize and one recognizes old voices, and then quite as suddenly the spirit steals away and all is silence once more.

The fraternities more than any other agency have been instrumental in depleting the old societies of their social functions. These organizations have multiplied rapidly since 1902.

The panel of fraternities and sororities at Lawrence is as follows:

1. Theta Phi, a local fraternity, organized in 1897.
2. Kappa Upsilon, a local sorority, organized in 1902 and became a chapter of the national Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority in 1915.
3. Beta Sigma Phi, a local fraternity, organized in 1902.
4. Alpha Gamma Phi, a local sorority, organized in 1903.
5. Theta Gamma Delta, a local sorority, organized in 1903 and became a chapter of the national Delta Gamma Sorority in 1915.
6. Delta Iota, a local fraternity, organized in 1903.
7. Zeta Omega, a local sorority, organized in 1904 and became a chapter of the national Alpha Delta Pi Sorority in 1908.
8. Sigma Tau Nu, a local fraternity, organized in 1909, and became a chapter of the national Sigma Phi Epsilon in 1914.
9. The Mace, an honorary senior society for men, organized in 1910.
10. Tau Kappa Alpha, the national fraternity for debaters, the installation of which is a very distinctive honor to Lawrence, was installed in 1911.
11. Mu Phi Epsilon, a national music sorority was installed in 1912.
12. Theta Alpha, honorary senior society for women, organized in 1913.
13. Phi Mu, a national sorority installed in 1914.
14. We might here mention the fact that in 1912 Lawrence was granted membership into the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, though this organization is not a sorority as the term is commonly understood. It is a very great honor for Lawrence to belong to this order as membership is confined to colleges and universities commonly recognized to be among the best in the United States. All women graduates of Lawrence become members of this association.
14. Phi Beta Kappa, a national fraternity for scholars, was installed in 1914. This is the most distinguished collegiate scholarship fraternity in America and is admitted only into colleges and universities of the first rank. This fraternity was established in 1776 at William and Mary's College and in 1915 had a membership of nearly 29,000. It is a national fraternity whose symbol, the key, is everywhere recognized as a mark of scholarship. The establishment of this fraternity at Lawrence has already stimulated scholarship and doubtless will inspire coming generations of students to higher intellectual endeavor than has been manifest in the past. Each year a speaker of national repute delivers at commencement time a Phi Beta Kappa address before the local fraternity. This year, 1915, Professor Paul Shorey of Chicago University delivered the public address.

Three fraternities, the Theta Phi, Beta Sigma Phi, and Delta Iota own their own homes. They are houses ranging in value from four to eight thousand dollars. The Sigma Phi Epsilon rents a fine house from the College. This fraternity has an accumulating fund with which they plan to purchase a fraternity house. None of the sororities own houses but all have chapter rooms either in the college or at different private homes in the city. It is proposed that each of the sororities have a suite of rooms in the new Myra Goodwin Plantz dormitory, after the custom at Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois.

Each of the fraternities and sororities issue a publication with which they aim to keep in touch with their Alumni.

The loyalty of these fraternities and sororities to the college is marked. At no time has the standard of fine manliness been so high throughout all the fraternities as during the last two years.

May each manly heart in the dimming years echo with the call,

"When shall all men's good
Be each man's rule."

THE RELIGIOUS LIFE AT LAWRENCE.

I. The Schedule.

1. Chapel service four times per week (attendance required).
2. Regular attendance upon the church of student's choice required.
3. College prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
4. Student Christian Association devotional meetings every Sunday.
5. College vesper services once per month.
6. One or more series of several days of evangelistic meetings each year.
7. Devotional voluntary Bible study classes maintained throughout the year by the student Christian association.
8. Student Volunteer Band offers frequent open meetings for those interested in Christian Missions.
9. Forty-four hours of college credit offered in the English Bible, religion and Christian missions.

Where is there a church that makes as adequate provision for the spiritual growth of its constituency?

II. The Spirit.

The Christian spirit pervades the teaching of history, literature, philosophy and science at Lawrence. Even mathematics and languages may be taught in such a way as to tend to make or unmake character. The two powerful factors of viewpoint and personal influence pervade every feature of curriculum and official college life at Lawrence. We believe that scholarship in a teacher without Christian character is pernicious, better no teaching than that kind. Lawrence stands for the principle that "Schools which teach only a world of books have no place in a world of beings." Therefore throughout the college community of faculty and students the Lawrence man is estimated not alone for what he knows, but for what he is. It is recognized that the end of education is not knowledge, but personality, and must be directed to the whole man—intellectual, esthetic and religious.

III. The Life.

Lawrence is a Christian, not a sectarian college. The trustees and professors represent various denominations. The religious life of the institution is on the broad basis of Christian fellowship without reference to denomination or creed. Chapel services, prayer meetings, vespers, evangelistic meetings, are all wholesomely attractive, the aim being to combine dignity, simplicity and spirituality. In them the right living and high thinking of the college community crystalize.

Lawrence is a Christian community, all of the professors and eighty per cent of the students being professing Christians. Membership in the student associations are conditioned only by Christian character. From the time in the fall when the new students are met at the trains by committees of the Christian associations the intellectual, social and athletic activities are dominated by the Christian life of the college community. The religious life is the most vital factor of the institution. There are few if any colleges where the reasonableness of the Christian life is more recognized by all. Not only are the members of the faculty examples of character and morals, but habits of immoral or questionable nature are under the ban of Lawrence student community sentiment and life.

Outgrowths of the foregoing nine points of the schedule are numerous prayer circles at different times of the year, constant personal endeavor on part of individuals to higher spiritual living, deputation teams of students who spend vacations in evangelistic work in small towns, eight weeks clubs in the summer for Christian work of the students at their homes, a mission Sunday School in Appleton maintained by students, Christian work maintained by the students at the Wittenberg Indian School, large delegations of students to the Lake Geneva Summer Conferences, etc. Where is there a church of equal numbers in its constituency that gives a better account of practical Christian living?

PROF. W. S. NAYLOR, D.D.

THE BACK LOG.

I hold you long in my hands
And muse before my fire.
Oh lichen gray and dewy wands
And sweet entangling briar!
And still I seem to hear in branches dim
The winds' impassioned choir.

You stood in the forest long
And the swift wind over you—
For you he made his marvellous song
Of flight, and dawn, and dew!
And from a sapling slender as a boy
Oh miracle, you grew.

And wore a murmuring crown
And dreamed the dreams of old
And put on silver, gold and brown
Like some sweet youth of old
Who keeps his armor all the anxious night
And prays amid the cold.

And all the world was near,
And that bright marvel, Time.
You met them like a listening seer
And dowered them with your prime.
Oh wonder, wonder! Knight upon the quest!
And poet with his rhyme!

Body and milk white core,
Branch for the thrushes nest—
Cloak that a musing Titan wore,
Staunch and passionate breast!
You lift them up like a lord and give them away
For Use, for all Unrest,—

To be bold wings in the air—
A new built home where lips
May wait for love!—the low hive where
An amber honey drips!—
And on the unchartered ocean, long ago,
From Spain, three dauntless ships.

Oh victory lost and strange
Where one gives all away!
Body and breath and all sweet change
And a blue, blue mounting day!
Never again the snows nor the tides of spring
Nor the free storm on its way!

And now in my two hands
I hold your body bright,
A servant, fleet to my commands—
For fire warm and light,
In one sweet chamber and for children dear,
Against the wintry night.

O springing rapturously!
O warmth about my room!
You spend, and for an humble three
This last divine perfume.
And ah, you know—you know, now, where you have gone,
Life's dear and uttermost bloom.

MILDRED McNEAL SWEENEY, 1899.

FIRST PHI BETA KAPPA ORATION AT LAWRENCE, 1914.

Senator Robert J. Gamble, class 1872, delivered the first Phi Beta Kappa oration at Lawrence in Peabody Hall, June 15, 1914. He spoke on "Efficiency in Citizenship." The following is his address:

"I greet you on this happy and hopeful occasion. Happy for the reason I have confidence the year has brought rich returns, with increasing enthusiasm and higher ambitions for the new year and the new relations into which some of you are about to enter. Hopeful, in the consciousness of duty well performed, which has brought, as it always will bring, its full measure of reward with increasing promise for the future.

"I appreciate the privilege, and I can assure you I regard the pleasure as exceptional to be afforded this opportunity to meet and to greet old as well as new friends, surrounded by memories and associations that have grown more hallowed and delightful as the years have passed. To visit these scenes and tread again these halls, I feel I am surrounded by a cloud of witnesses that makes me again one of your number. But I see not the students of today but the teachers and student body of years long gone.

"I see Doctor Steele, whose strong character, rich and well, equipped mind, and high ideals of life and service made his presence an inspiration and a benediction; Professor Yocum, whose self-poise and clearness of demonstration gave his classroom an air of composure and satisfaction; Professor Foye, whose devotion to duty and tender sympathy and helpfulness drew to him the affectionate regard and love of his students; Professor Jones, whose classic knowledge and exactness gave enthusiasm to his classes and made his department one of the strong factors of the institution; and Miss Evans, whose exceptional equipment and largeness of character were then recognized, and at that time gave promise of the splendid service she was to render.

"I see, too, my own classmates and intimates, and Raymond, the Nashs, the Andersons, the Favilles, the Cheynowths, the Williams, and Thwing, and Updike and Curtis and Whitman and Rexford, and my own brother, John R., and many, many more. I hear the oratory and witness again the rivalries and enthusiasm of the Phoenix and Philalathean Societies.

"But what a transformation has been wrought since the years of which I speak. In 1874, the year of my graduation, the institution, physically speaking, consisted of one building, College Hall, the campus, a limited library, and still more limited laboratories.

"The total value of its property and endowment did not then exceed probably $75,000. Its faculty was small and the number of professors and teachers limited. The number of students in college classes proper did not exceed in the aggregate, throughout the year, seventy-five.

"We, however, will not measure its strength, its power for good, or circumscribe its ideals or the devotion of the student body, the self-sacrifice of its teachers or the faith of its friends, by mere physical or material assets. But clinging to the faith and ideals of its founders, and always maintaining them, though sometimes under adverse and discouraging conditions, it was then rich in spiritual force and intellectual strength, and in associations born of enthusiasm and devotion that laid well the foundation for the splendid realization of today.

"Forty years have brought their ever recurring changes, their accretions, their development and their growth. How different the scene before me today! The material equipment has grown and developed beyond recognition. Buildings beautiful, ornate and capacious have been multiplied; the campus extended and beautified, the library expanded and housed in its own magnificent home, the laboratories enlarged and serviceable, and with aggregate assets in property and endowment of $1,500,000; a strong faculty and in numbers commensurate with the larger service to be rendered, and with students in attendance in the College proper numbering upwards of 450—these outside of those attending the different departments of the institution.

ALEXANDER GYMNASIUM.

"This great transformation is most gratifying, and especially to the alumni whose experience came earlier in the history and development of the institution. This splendid realization surely has not come fortuitously. It is the result of wise and splendid counsel, of self-sacrifice and devotion to high ideals; the submerging of the material to the spiritual; to trust in God and confidence in man; and that the idea of the development and making of character and efficiency in life is worth while. I know the student body appreciates these enlarged opportunities, and the inspiration that comes to you must quicken your endeavors and heighten your ambition in qualifying yourselves for supremest service in your future.

"These four decades have been unusual and exceptional in every line of human endeavor. No years in the history of the race have surpassed them in the development and application of agencies for the elevation and betterment of mankind, in education, in spiritual and ethical culture, in the largeness and breadth of philanthropies, in social and economic improvement, in legislation, state and national, looking to the curbing and regulation of the strong forces in our body politic, and making them responsive and subservient to the popular will; and in the end to the ideal of true representative government, and the liberty and welfare of the individual regulated by law.

"It is gratifying beyond measure that our Alma Mater has kept pace with the tremendous forces that have wrought such marvelous changes in the onrush of these later years.

"In no line or department have these activities been more marked or the results more pronounced during the past forty years than in education. I have not all the data at hand, but perhaps sufficient for my purpose.

"In 1874 the population of the United States was approximately 42,000,000. The true wealth of the country in that year was probably $34,000,000,000. There were substantially 390 Universities, Colleges, and Technical Schools in that year doing actual college work, with 3040 professors and instructors engaged as a teaching force in these institutions. The number of students in the college departments of the institutions of this class was 25,994, and in the preparatory departments 19,476.

"There was expended for the common school during that year something over $100,000,000. The number of teachers engaged in the common schools in that year was about 225,000. The percentage of illiteracy to the total population was 20 per cent.

"I do not have exact or satisfactory data as to the value of the property of the Universities, Colleges and Technical Schools enumerated, or of the total amount of their endowments and productive funds. These at that time must have aggregated a very considerable amount, and especially with the larger and older institutions. I will not attempt to quote figures covering these items.

"Our population during these four decades has increased practically two and a half times and now aggregates fully 100,000,000. Our wealth has increased substantially three-fold and now aggregates $110,000,000,000. It far surpasses that of any other country in the world or of history.

"Instead of 300 Universities, Colleges and Technical Schools we now have 596 of immensely higher grade and equipment. The instructors have been increased from 3040 to 30,034. The students in the college departments of these institutions have grown from 25,934 to 198,453, and in the preparatory departments from 19,476 to 63,815.

"These figures certainly should give the highest encouragement. Our increase in population and wealth has been marvelous and phenomenal. In the latter, no other nation has ever made such stupendous strides. In this respect we are without a rival. Yet, in the attendance of college students during this period, the proportionate increase has far outstripped that of our population or our wealth.

"The work done by these institutions is meeting the approval and the hearty response of public spirited citizens and philanthropists everywhere. Their benefactions in 1912 aggregated $25,783,000.

"The value of the property owned by these institutions reaches the enormous sum of $409,000,000, while their endowment and productive funds aggregate $357,000,000. Their annual working income amounts to $90,000,000.

"The Federal Government has been most generous in the donation of lands, not only for the benefit of the common schools but also for the State Universities. The Land Grant Institutions and Experiment Stations receive annually from the Federal Treasury $4,000,000, and under pending legislation it is proposed to vastly increase this sum for agricultural extension work, and for other highly important and desirable objects.

"Activities for the advancement and support of education and for its practical efficiency have not been restricted to the Federal Government. Eighty-seven state-aided Institutions of higher education received, from the several states in which they are located, during 1912, $22,100,000.

"Aside from the moneys applied for the promotion of the higher and technical education, there was expended during the year 1912, for the common schools, the vast aggregate of $447,000,000, and in that service there were employed 533,606 teachers. The estimated value of all public property used for school purposes reaches the vast sum of $1,221,000,000.

"It is stated by the Commissioner of Education in his last Annual Report that there was expended for education by public and private agencies during the year 1912 the stupendous aggregate of $680,000,000. It is from the foregoing report I have compiled the greater part of the foregoing data, and it has related largely to the year 1912 as being the most recent information available.

"The percentage of illiteracy to the total population has been reduced from 20 per cent in 1870 to 7.7 per cent in 1910. This in itself is a most marked and significant showing, when we consider the density of illiteracy of the colored population and of certain sections of the south, as well as the character of the foreign immigration we in later years have been receiving, and which we of necessity have been compelled to assimilate during the last two decades.

"Outside of the direct and immediate, which I have enumerated, there are other and substantial agencies for the promotion of education and for civic and moral betterment:

"1. The General Education Board with an endowment of $30,000,000.

"2. The Carnegie Foundation for the advancement of teaching, with an endowment of $14,000,000.

"3. The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, $10,000,000.

"4. Russell Sage Foundation for studying the cause of poverty, preserving health and promoting sanitation, $10,000,000.

"5. The Rockefeller Foundation proposed to be incorporated by congress for the promotion of the well-being of the entire people, and of all forms of human progress, not to exceed $100,000,000.

"If an estimate is to be placed upon the value of education for the elevation of our citizenship, by the investment for that purpose, in the aggregate annual expenditure therefor, in the number of teachers consecrated to the service, in the self-sacrifice of men and women to promote it, in the munificent philanthropies which each year are devoted to it, and the great public sentiment that approves and encourages it surely then it must be a prize worth the winning.

"While this tremendous advance in education, and its far-reaching application along all lines of human activity has become more pronounced, public and private life has been elevated and bettered. Conditions heretofore tolerated in either have been reformed, and a new and a better age of life and of living is upon us. These conditions have not come by accident. Their realization is the result of knowledge and of higher ethical standards, born with the inspiration for better conditions through the refining influence of intellectual and spiritual culture.

"Although moral and spiritual conditions in our national life are far from the ideal, and a revival and strengthening in each are much to be desired, yet at no time in our history has the altruistic spirit been so predominant and so earnest, patriotism more sincere or genuine, the scholar and the student more devoted to solving the problems for better social and economic conditions, when private as well as public benefactions were more generous, and philanthropists were seeking out larger as well as more specific fields for the welfare and uplift of the people.

"The church has kept pace with the spirit of the time. It has always stood for the higher, the spiritual and the ideal in life and character, and has co-operated in all forms of activities to bring about better conditions. Higher education has had no more potential factor in modern Christendom, looking to its establishment and maintenance on a substantial basis, than the church.

"This awakened and more enlightened and altruistic spirit has taken more definite form in these recent years, and, justified by public service corporations should be servants rather than masters of the public; that the national resources should be utilized in the present and their surplus and abundance conserved for the future, and that the wealth of forests, minerals and waterpower should not be monopolized by the few; that the national health should be conserved in the manufacture as well as the sale of pure food.

"Governmental activities, and especially those of the nation, have been multiplied and extended, entering wider fields not long since not even contemplated. It looks to the protection of life and the safety of employees, and to employer's liability and workmen's compensation in interstate traffic, to the guarding of ocean travel, to the limiting of the hours of labor of women as well as of men; to the care and wellbeing of children, and not long since a Federal Bureau was established for that purpose; to labor and solving the great problems that affect it and its relation to our modern industrial life, as evidenced recently by the creation of a separate Department of the Government for that purpose, with a Cabinet officer at its head; the extension and activities of the Department of Agriculture, in its multiplicity of endeavors to improve agricultural conditions and to make the farm more productive and profitable, and surround rural life with happier conditions; the extension of Rural Free Delivery, that the agriculturalist, with the telephone and the automobile, may keep in immediate touch with the movements and activities of our daily life; the Weather Bureau, that advises and guards the farmer in his crops as well as the mariner on the water; to sanitation and more humane conditions in prisons and reformatories.

"Legislation has also been enacted along lines giving expression to higher ideals in our public life and character, in extending the field of international arbitration, in enforcing, as far as it may, arbitration in industrial differences. In sustaining our integrity and financial honor in the basis of our currency, and refusing to sanction by law its debasement. In asserting the Monroe doctrine in the controversy between

Great Britain and Venezuela, at the risk of war, and enforcing arbitration of the differences. The assertion of the right, and its enforcement, that inter-state traffic is the rightful function of the Federal Government, and when state or local authority failed or refused co-operation, and anarchy prevailed. Federal authority saw to its enforcement; the adoption and extension of the Civil Service; in the unselfish rescue of Cuba from Spanish mismanagement and cruelties, with all the unlooked for responsibilities that followed; in the construction of the Panama Canal, at enormous expense, to shorten the highways of the world's commerce.

"In response to popular demand Constitutional amendments have been provided for the election of United States Senators by direct vote, and for the collection of a Federal Income Tax; a Corrupt Practice Act has been passed, governing the election of senators and congressmen. In most of the states primary election laws are in force. The enfranchisement of women and national prohibition have become paramount issues.

In these later days we have, in some of the States, the Initiative and Referendum. We have advocates of pensions to Federal Employees, State Insurance, Old Age Pensions, the Recall of Judges and of Judicial Decisions. To some of these innovations, and especially the latter, I am not yet prepared to give my concurrence. To my mind it would break down the independence and integrity and high character of the courts, and weaken our Government in one of its chiefest sources of strength and confidence.

"Our diplomacy, as a rule, has been conducted with high and patriotic motives. It has been sincere and genuine and frank. It has looked to justice and to better conditions in the world's civilization, and for peace. At no time have we been stronger or in better position to assert ourselves for our own or humanity's welfare than the present. We have been the strongest factor in promoting the world's peace. It has been through our initiative more than that of any other people that the Court of Arbitration at the Hague was instituted and is maintained.

"Legislators and executive officers, national as well as state, have become more responsive to well directed and intelligent public opinion.

"The growth and development of our National Constitution, as interpreted and applied in this later era by our highest court, to meet the enlarged and expanding forces in our evolution and growth, have given confidence in the permanency of our institutions and the wisdom of the Fathers in its establishment.

"In this era has come largely the development and the marvelous practical and multifarious applications of electricity, the wireless telegraph, with its protection to ocean travel, the wireless telephone which already is a reality, the telephone which extends as well as concentrates intercommunication; the aeroplane, that makes real the dreams of the ages and whose future adaptability and utilization no man can foretell; the accelerated rapidity and greater motive power in transportation by land and by sea, and the facilities for the comfort and convenience of the traveler, making the modern Pullman sumptuous and the ocean steamship a floating palace. It also permits the concentration of business and industrial activities in commercial centers and affords relief in suburban homes. The modern battleship has been developed, with its marvelous power and superlative mechanical appliances. We trust, however, it is to be maintained as an insurer of peace and for commercial extension rather than as an engine of destruction.

"During these years the scientist, with his accustomed devotion, has applied himself to the great tasks before him,—to bacteriology and all it implies, to sanitation, to the staying of disease, the arresting of contagion, the suppression of pestilence and plague, and Governmental agencies have co-operated in the study and research.

"In medicine there has been a great advance and in surgery its triumphs have been marvelous.

"In these great movements during this period, what has been the place of the college graduate? Has he, or has he not, been a primal factor in solving these problems? In higher as well as in all lines of education it has been the college man that has led, directed, encouraged and sustained it.

"In National legislators and in National executives, the scholarship and the equipment, with the wealth of knowledge, of the college man has predominated, and they have been the largest factors with the strongest leadership in the solution of the great governmental problems during these eventful years.

"It has been the scientists who gained their first knowledge, as well as their enthusiasm, in the college classroom, and who, through ceaseless labor and devotion, have pursued their investigations along infinite lines, with results of the highest service to humanity; in bacteriology, in sanitation that has enormously reduced the death rate in congested centers and has stayed and arrested the advance of pestilence and the spread of contagion; has made urban life as healthful and in many ways better protected than that of the country, has taught the deleterious effect of impure food until public sentiment was slowly aroused and legislation enacted prohibiting its manufacture or sale.

"The experts of the Agricultural Department, who have wrought such improvement in the productiveness of the farm, reinvigorated the soil and stood as sentinels over the crops, to guard them from their despoilers and their enemies, are largely the products of the college. The captains of engineering in the great undertakings of these latter days, the revolutionizers in modern transportation and communication, and its acceleration, by steam, by electricity, the automobile and the aeroplane and the telephone, have been largely the products of the institutions of higher learning.

"The experts of the Army and Navy, in the development and application of the mechanism of recent appliances that have revolutionized modern warfare, are the products of the schools.

"It has but recently been demonstrated that Prof. Langley, the great scholar and scientist, was, in fact, the father of modern aeroplane, but not so recognized until after he had suffered apparent defeat and died in humiliation and of a broken heart.

"It cannot be told how much the special training of Dr. Read served him in his experiments with the yellow fever germ and its transmission, or in the great work of Col. Gorgas in reclaiming from Miasma and pestilence the lower levels of Panama, saving the lives of thousands and making it a desirable location for human habitation; or of Col. Goethals and his assistants, in bringing to a successful conclusion the climax in the world's engineering skill, and in making real the dreams of the commercial world for centuries.

"In the application of scientific research and discovery, and its utilization in modern life, in the advancement in medicine and in the development of surgery, the college man has been most conspicuous. In changes from the temperature of continental America to the tropics, made necessary by modern territorial expansion, his discoveries and developments have made the white man's burden easier and safer, and for this great service the student and the scholar has his just reward.

"With the development of our own Alma Mater during these eventful years, with the progress and expansion of modern collegiate education, and its permanency made secure, by generous endowment and public interest; with university extension and secondary education making rapid development, with the common schools, under their increasing burden, making sure and substantial headway, as the Federal census demonstrates; with the increasing interest of the general Government and the states in the cause of education and of educators, in the reorganization and correction of errors in the system, and in generous appropriations for extension work, and in the tremendous increase and educational force of the press through the newspapers and magazines, surely those of us who have faith that the development of mind and character is to make more sure the foundations of our institutions have substantial reasons for congratulation.

"During this time modern political standards have been elevated. The administration of law and the enacting of legislation have sought more to meet modern industrial, economic and social conditions, rendered so intricate and complex by our expanding and rapid development. Individual activities have co-operated with Government agencies in bringing about better and improved conditions in health, in living, in material welfare, and in the pursuit of happiness.

"I may be looking with too optimistic a view. I confess I have been searching for the larger and greater accomplishments during the period named. I do not mean to be understood that I feel there are not yet great problems to be solved, industrial, economic, social and governmental. Individual opportunities are far from equal, and social justice and industrial welfare demand much of the future.

"With such substantial accomplishments in comparatively so brief a time, and with the college graduate taking so commanding a part along all avenues for the uplifting of humanity and for its betterment and happiness, is it not enough to give encouragement and enthusiasm to the undergraduate to fit and equip himself for the great duties and responsibilities of the future? The present, with its environments and its hopes, and with its exhilarating and inviting opportunities for supreme service, commands your devotion that you may do your full part in the immediate future.

"There is danger of failure in each of our lives, and I believe we owe it to ourselves, to society, and to our Creator to make the most of ourselves as individual factors in life's struggle, and under what environment are greater opportunities afforded for the discipline of the mind, the development of character and fixing of high ideals, than that of the undergraduate in college?

"It is here our aims in life are largely determined, our ambitions centered, and the self-consciousness of our individual potentiality realized. It is here our position is fixed by the inexorable and unerring judgment of our fellows, our associations here are the strongest factors in the making and development of our character. We here find our rightful level, either through the discipline of our associates or the willing recognition of our worth. The habits here gained of companionship, of good fellowship and of learning how to really meet and attract people will stand us well in hand in later life in our relations with men. Athletics had not the place then as now, but in my judgment, under reasonable restrictions, they have done much to develop many of the highest ideals of true character and of manhood.

"It is here the student habit is acquired which should remain with us throughout life, renewing our strength, quickening our activities, reviving the inspiration of our youth and inviting us to dwell in the companionship of good books, and in the intimacy of the master minds of all time, in the quiet of our library.

"In practical results, in largeness of efficiency, in the development of well-rounded character for infinite and varied service to the individual, to society, and to the state, collegiate education carries its own justification. From our own knowledge and from statistics available from the standard Biographical Dictionaries, and otherwise, it is demonstrated that the men and women of prominence and who have records of successful effort and accomplishments, and whose names appear therein, were largely college graduates and as a rule have been the unchallenged victors in life's contests.

"The professional and the technical schools have their own well-defined objects and serve their own special purposes. The mission of the College, however, in the language of President Micklejohn, is: 'That the student must understand and the friends of the college must understand that knowledge is the guide of life, that the college intends to give, not the specialized information of the trades or professional school, but the unified interpretation of the world which is in sight.'

"I congratulate the College that a chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa has been installed during the past year. It certainly is a certificate of the high standing in scholarship and character of the institution. The establishment of this most highly prized of college fraternities will surely be an incentive to higher scholarship, and stimulate the activities of the student body in the up-building of the character and standing of the institution.

"I make my own profound acknowledgements to the friends who signally honored me in an election to its membership. I am ambitious to be true to its high ideals, and not lack in the inspiration that animates its distinguished membership. The original purposes of the Society were the encouragement of patriotism and scholarship. These were and still are worthy objects that have inspired an exceptional and selected membership for one hundred and thirty-eight years.

"Philosophy is as much the 'Guide of Life' now as at the institution of the Society, born in the throes of war and the struggle for national as well as for intellectual freedom. May we be true to the spirit of its founders and the high ideals in scholarship and service of its distinguished membership, throughout its long and marvelous career.

LAWRENCE ALUMNI ASSOCIATIONS.

THE ANNUAL ALUMNI MEETING.

The annual meeting of the General Alumni Association was held on Tuesday of Commencement week. The entire afternoon and evening were given over to the association. About 190 graduates and old students took the steamer "Leander Choate" at the dock at two o'clock for a boatripe to Neenah Park. The regular meeting of the alumni association was held at four o'clock at the park. The following is the program of the afternoon:

ALUMNI DAY.

PROGRAM.

- 12:30 p. m.—Lunch on the campus.
Marshal—Charles F. Karnopp, '05.
- 1:30 p. m.—Procession to the Government Dock.
Marshal—Frank Schneller, '02.
- 2:00 p. m.—Passenger boat Leander Choate leaves Government Dock promptly.
- 3:30 p. m.—Arrives at the pavilion, Neenah Park.

BUSINESS MEETING.

1. Singing college songs.
2. Initiation of the class of 1915.
3. Address to the class of 1915 by Bradford P. Raymond, '70, Ex-President Lawrence College and Wesleyan University.
"Are Your Ideals Worth While?"
4. Memorials.
5. The Alumni Magazine
Paul Amundson, '14.
6. The Alumni Association Secretary and Permanent Class Secretaryships.
Fred G. Dickerson, '93.
7. Close of Business Session.

5:15 p. m.—Ball game. Captains Frank Schneller, '02, and C. D. Collier, '99.

6:15 p. m.—Supper in the Pavilion, interspersed with college songs.

7:15 p. m.—Toastmaster, New President of the Alumni Association.

The Class of 1915.....Lewis Keller

Reminiscences .....Delbert Lean, '01

Beginning to be an Alumnus.....Enid Saecker, '13

Roll call of classes responded to by class capers!

8:30 p. m.—Boat for Appleton.

Alma Mater.

OFFICERS

President—John Faville, '71

First Vice President—C. S. Boyd, '93

Second Vice President—Mrs. A. J. Stevens, '88

Secretary—Zelia A. Smith, '82

Treasurer—H. W. Abraham, '91

The business meeting was especially important. Several addresses were delivered upon what could be done to bring the college and the alumni more closely together. It was decided that the publishing of an Alumni Quarterly was a necessary matter. A committee of which Prof. J. H. Farley is chairman was appointed to arrange publication. This committee has been actively at work. Arrangements have been completed for a publication which will be a credit to the alumni association. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Frank J. Schneller, 1902; First Vice President, Fred J. Dickerson, 1893; Second Vice President, Mrs. Mary Jenkins Wiley, 1904; Treasurer, Henry W. Abraham, 1891; Permanent Secretary, Zelia Anne Smith, 1882.

WISCONSIN ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

The Wisconsin Alumni Association was organized some twelve years ago and has been regularly held in Milwaukee at the time when the State Teachers' Association convenes. It is the largest gathering of Lawrence people which meets during the year. A banquet is always held at which there are from 75 to 125 persons present. Graduates and old students attending the State Teachers' Association are quite unanimous in their attendance. It is a time of good fellowship and of the renewing of acquaintances. Speeches are always interesting and enthusiasm is generally at a high point. The officers are changed from year to year. The present year they are:

President, C. F. Karnopp; Secretary, Mrs. Mabel Gile; Treasurer, Roland Marsh; Executive Committee: Charles Ford, O. T. Williams, Earl Gile, H. W. Newton.

The last meeting was held in Gimbel's Grill Room. There were about 95 persons present. Prof. Orr of the department of Public Speaking of the college gave a reading, toasts were delivered by Hon. W. H. Hatton of the Board of Trustees, President Plantz of the college faculty, L. M. Alexander, President of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Leopold Hammel, the presiding officer, and two or three others. A Milwaukee quartet of Lawrence men furnished most acceptable music.

LAWRENCE COLLEGE EASTERN ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

This association was launched at a dinner at the Park Avenue Hotel in New York City in 1906, when William B. Millar of '89 was elected president; A. P. Anderson, secretary, and C. H. Pipher, treasurer. Since then luncheons have been held in 1908 and 1909, dinners in 1911 and 1912, and in 1913 and 1914 reunions on the Tuesday evening preceding the annual meeting of the Carnegie Foundation which Dr. Plantz attends.

The most elaborate of these functions was the dinner at the Hotel Martinique in 1911, when outside speakers reinforced our home made efforts. The most hilarious occasion was the reunion of 1913 when photographs, ancient and modern, were thrown on the screen of the lecture room of the Young Women's Christian Association national headquarters. About 25 persons, graduates, non-graduates and men and women bound by matrimonial ties to the foregoing, usually assemble from New York and its suburbs, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Boston and other eastern points are represented from time to time. Dr. Plantz always reports on present conditions at the college. Dr. Raymond is often here. J. I. Bartholomew, Gunluf Guthormsen and other worthies are less regular fixtures than the officers who never fail. This means Archey D. Ball and Guido Bassard as previous presidents. Arthur Hansen served as treasurer while in the city, but Archibald S. Bennett of Boston has glorified the office of treasurer by installing a financial system—fifty cent dues which covers cost of printing and postage and even the refreshment charges for the reunions. At the 1913 gathering the guest of honor as far as age was concerned was Mrs. Josephine Cooke Dyer, daughter of President Edwin Cooke and widow of A. R. Dyer of the class of 1859.

We strongly approve the idea of an Alumni Bulletin as a regular periodical and would suggest that the location of all the Alumni Associations be printed in each number, giving addresses of the officers, and of one alumnus in each of the prominent centers of that district, whither visitors may turn for information of alumni in that vicinity.

We are glad to hear of the organization in Spokane, with which one of our previous members, John P. Jockinsen, is identified. The far west has attracted a much larger number of striving Lawrence people than has the effete East.

ELIZABETH WILSON, President,
600 Lexington Ave., New York City.

HELEN JANE WALDO, Secretary.

CHICAGO ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

This is either a history of the Chicago Lawrence Club or only a chapter from the entire story; I have no way of knowing any facts that may lie back of March 12, 1910. On that day some facts were recorded in a little black book that now contains the minutes of club meetings and the membership roll.

Frank G. Schneller, Warren H. Stevens and the writer, called the first meeting, which was held in the Chicago office of the Kimberly Clark Paper Company. Eleven men came. Our presidents in order have been Frank G. Schneller, Dr. Charles G. Fellows, William H. Wescott, and Andrew P. Anderson. Members have been notified by the secretary whenever special visitors were expected at the monthly luncheons, and the same officer has also made all plans for the annual banquets. This yearly gathering has been open to all men and women who have studied at Lawrence, and President Plantz has met with us each year.

The first Tuesday of every month the club now meets in the college dining rooms of the new Morrison hotel for a one o'clock luncheon. Our present secretary does his work well, and each time gets out about eight men, a fair part of the thirty-two now on the mailing list. New names are constantly being added to the roll, so that through regular attendance at the luncheons a fellow is sure to meet old friends unexpectedly.

Things could of course be done to make the Chicago Lawrence Club a greater success. First of all, it might and should do some constructive work for the college; it never has. Then, every one knowing the addresses of Lawrence men in Chicago should send the information to Glenn D. Adams, secretary, 930 Belmont Ave., Chicago. Lastly, the reader of this record should plan his visits to Chicago so as to be present at the monthly meetings.

DAVID H. STEVENS, '06.

MILWAUKEE LAWRENCE CLUB.

The announcement that a Lawrence Milwaukee club was going to be formed appeared in the Milwaukee papers, May, 1914. Twenty loyal Lawrentians came out and everyone was most agreeably surprised by the fine fellowship meeting which was the result. Col. Watrous of the class of ex. '64 was elected President and the organization definitely formed. It was a large success, largely because it was in Milwaukee, near Lawrence, but more largely because it was in good hands and backed by a good deal of Lawrence enthusiasm.

It has since become one of the most important Lawrence centers of the country. The association has grown to a total membership of about 125 and has a large average attendance at its monthly meetings held each year, during the Fall and Winter months. These meetings have been liberally supplied with speakers of prominence. The club aims to boost the Alma Mater in every way possible, to boost for the good times at reunions, to have a definite body to which those who will, can secure Lawrence fellowship, to get better acquainted, to consider plans that will be of value to the college and to be a help to the members that are being continually added.

At the third annual meeting of the association held last February, Mark Klein, ex. '99 was elected President; Cora Zinkgraff, '08, Vice President, and Chas. Ford, '12, Secretary and Treasurer, with an executive committee of Judge O. T. Williams, E. G. Gile, ex. '11, H. W. Newton '11 with ex. Pres. H. C. Tanner, directly in charge. A program of interest had been arranged, the main features of which were a fine address from Dr. Plantz and a few spontaneous toasts to the new officers and year. Dr. Naylor gave his famous lecture on "Watts" at the April meeting and Mr. Kleist very kindly furnished the means for a most enjoyable May meeting by placing at the club's disposal his large new home and Lake front at White Fish Bay where a basket picnic was held. Next year, like all other Lawrence activities, the club is going to be "bigger and better than ever."

MINNEAPOLIS ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

The Minneapolis Alumni Association was organized in May, 1912. As the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church was at this time held in Minneapolis, there were quite a number of Lawrence men in the city as delegates or visitors. By the efforts of Mr. Hugh J. Hughes and one or two others of the local alumni, arrangements were made for a banquet at the West Hotel. Mr. Hughes, class of 1898, was elected president and Mr. Claude Cole, class of 1902 was elected secretary and treasurer. There were about forty guests. Addresses were made by President Plantz, E. C. Dixon, class of 1888, George H. Trever, class of 1881, J. I. Bartholomew, class of 1881. Remarks were made by a number of others.

Owing to the removal of Mr. Cole from the city the alumni association did not have another meeting until March 26th of the present year when a banquet was held at the Y. M. C. A. of St. Paul. The meeting was not as largely attended as the previous one, but there were between twenty and thirty present and an enjoyable evening was held. President Plantz delivered an address. At this meeting Prof. Arthur W. Johnson, former student, was elected president, and Conrad Kranz, class of 1911, was elected secretary and treasurer. It is the purpose of the association to hold yearly meetings. There are between forty and fifty persons connected with the local association.

SPOKANE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

I am pleased to inform you that the Lawrentian meeting recently called in Spokane by Cornellison, Jockinsen, and Nehf was a success. Seventeen former Lawrence students and friends gathered in the East Room of the Davenport Hotel at 6:30 p. m. December 29th, where old-time songs were sung, reminiscences given, and good fellowship enjoyed. Letters were read from Pres. Samuel Plantz and Prof. John Charles Lymer, and from several old students who could not attend.

One of the permanent good things resulting from the meeting was the organization of former Lawrence students into an association to be known as the Spokane Association of Lawrence College, the objects of which shall be to promote the interests of the College and to unite in closer bonds of fellowship all former students and instructors residing in Spokane and the Inland Empire.

A constitution and by-laws were adopted and signed by those present, and the following officers were elected: president, Eben D. Cornelison; vice president, John P. Jockinsen; secretary, Arthur J. Collins; treasurer, Edith M. Logan. The President appointed the following committee for the ensuing year: advisory, Harley W. Nehf; membership, Arthur J. Collins; publicity, Thomas J. Bolitho; alumni, Francene M. Kellogg-Buck and Evelyn E. Orr; resolutions, John P. Jockinsen; social, C. D. Cole.

All former students and instructors may become active members of the Association, and their wives and husbands are eligible to associate membership. Annual dues are twenty-five cents and should be sent to Edith M. Logan, East 510 Thirty-third avenue, Spokane, Washington.

The annual meeting and banquet will be held in Spokane during the holidays or at such time as it will be possible to have some of the college faculty present. A picnic may be held each summer, and plans will be made to meet in a body at the annual Wisconsin banquet which will be held February 12th.

As over fifty Lawrentians are within easy distance of Spokane these meetings should be both pleasant and profitable.

RETIRED PROFESSORS DURING 1905-1915.

Sketches are here given of full professors who served for a period of four years or more, but not of instructors or professors with a brief term of service.

PROF. DEXTER P. NICHOLSON, A. M.

Dexter Putnam Nicholson was born near Eureka, Wisconsin, January 8, 1859. He was graduated from Lawrence with the class of 1881, and after special studies at Johns Hopkins and Chicago Universities served successively on the faculties of York and Yankton Colleges.

In 1892 he was elected to the alumni professorship of his Alma Mater for the department of Natural Science and in 1893 assumed the chair of Geology and Geography.

Although quiet and unassuming to a degree, Professor Nicholson's personality strongly expressed his blameless character, unfailing kindness and constant devotion to duty. Enriched by thorough scholarship and inspired by a fine enthusiasm for his chosen subject, he was nevertheless beautifully patient with the detail work of beginners in class-room and laboratory, and his relations with his students were an object-lesson in justice and helpfulness.

His lamented death in 1907 cut short a life consecrated to the noble ideals of usefulness.

PROF. FREEMAN A. HAVIGHORST, D. D.

It was my very great privilege to study history for four years under Professor Freeman A. Havighorst.

Beside his great store of knowledge and his ability to impart that knowledge to others, Professor Havighorst brought other qualities to his work quite as essential in the ideal teacher as scholarship and pedagogical ability—those of tact and interest in his students and a courtesy and kindness which were unfailing.

Those who studied under him are in a certain real sense still his students, in that, because of his broad interpretation of past history, they have a better understanding of present day events. Because he taught not only facts, but their real meaning and deeper significance, his students were inspired with a real love for history and an ambition for wider study.

Mabel Sackett.

PROF. W. J. BRINCKLEY, Ph. D.

In later years, long after we have passed out of the college environment, there are left only certain impressions of those glorious days. Among those pleasant memories of my college life, are those that linger around the personality of Dr. Brinckley. Well do I remember, when as a freshman, I first entered his class. What a feeling of welcome I received from that friendly voice and kind face. Perhaps there are other things besides friendship to be cultured and grown in a Biological laboratory, but to an ordinary homesick freshman, a kind word means far more than vast learning or scientific knowledge.

He was a man with a heart as sensitive to human life as was his intellect to the scientific mysteries of plants and animals. He was master of his subject, sympathetic with his pupils, and his brain peered far into the future of scientific achievements. His personal color tinted his subject matter with such a warm sensitiveness, that his pupils could not fail to feel that the subject was Biology—the study of life, the greatness of which can never be expressed and taught except through the soul and life of a great teacher and friend. To me his memory is an inspiration and an ideal for my future.

H. S. D.

PROF. JUDSON G. ROSEBUSH, A. M.

As a professor Mr. Rosebush gave to Lawrence what he is now giving to a more general public. His intelligent scrutiny and candid criticism coupled with his splendid power of analysis superbly endow him to deal with problems of the first magnitude in their deepest and broadest significance. His intellectual superiority is strikingly marked in his advanced thought. He appreciates the value of important temporary lessons but is more eager to emphasize those deeper and more fundamental truths which are vital in life. His ability to discern the splendid potentialities in persons so largely stimulates him to be a helpful educator. Even when he is most busy he is willing to satisfy the demands for his time.

He has an unselfish zeal for rendering unselfish public service and loyally responds to the needs of the community. His high motives cause him to use his power with justice and moderation. His patriotism is felt in the establishment of community interest in social and political questions. His good citizenship is shown by his activity for social amelioration and political freedom.

Mr. Rosebush is instinctively and spontaneously progressive in adopting correct moral standards, in establishing fundamental ethical principles and in advancing Christian ideals. He emphasizes those supreme values which cannot be measured in material things. He appreciates that temporary attainments of life are not an ultimate goal but that they are to be used only to secure a higher good. His noble character radiates such a helpful influence that others are made better by coming in contact with him. Lawrentians have a feeling of appreciation and gratitude for Mr. Rosebush's incalculable contributions to Lawrence.

PROF. EMANUEL GERECHTER, D. D.

The standards and ideals of a college are set by the teachers who contribute to the upbuilding of the institution, and give to it the status it holds in the community.

Among those who have composed our faculty and raised Lawrence College to the rank it now holds, Dr. Emanuel Gerechter, Professor of German Language and Literature, stands as one of the greatest.

He was born November 15th, 1842, in Borek, Prussia, and four years later his parents removed to Lissa where his father was principal of the school. Here he attended the public school and gymnasium, and in 1859 became a student at the Jewish Theological Seminary and University at Breslau. While studying here, he took the state examination, received his certificate and in 1860 began his first teaching.

After graduation in 1865, he served for one year as teacher and pastor in Kempen, Rhenish Prussia. The next year he came to America and held positions as Rabbi in New York City, Detroit, Grand Rapids, Mich., and Milwaukee. In Grand Rapids he was also Professor of German in the Central High School and in the Ladies' Bacon Seminary.

He came to Appleton in 1892 as Rabbi of Temple Zion; two years later was appointed Professor of Hebrew at Lawrence College and the following year became the professor of German also.

Beginning with five students, this department has grown until there are over two hundred students in these classes, and it is now one of the strongest in the college. A teachers' course has also been successfully maintained. At present there are fifteen courses in German.

In 1910, the anniversary of the fiftieth year of his teaching was celebrated by the faculty, students and friends of Lawrence with appropriate ceremonies. A large silver loving cup with the inscription, "In token of loving appreciation to a man who taught the art of living well" was presented to him.

After nineteen years of faithful, successful service in his chosen life work at Lawrence, he retired under the Carnegie Foundation in June, 1913, as Professor Emeritus of the German department. The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was also conferred upon him at the Commencement exercises of the college at this time.

He was always thoroughly master of his subject and expected the student to do his best. His own interest in his work was so great that it inspired others to appreciate the beauty and charm of German literature. Always willing to help by word or action, nothing was too much for him to do, if he could be of service to others.

The thoroughness of his teaching has been proven by the fact that many of his students have taken first place in competitive examinations, for instance for the Rhodes scholarships.

Though Dr. Gerechter has retired from active teaching at the college, he still keeps in touch with the student life. Hardly a day passes that some one does not come for advice or help. To all he is still "Our teacher and our friend."

His words of cheer and his genial smile, his sense of humor, his kindness and courtesy have endeared him to faculty and students alike. Young men and women who have come in contact with him, have a broader outlook on life, are more charitable in their judgment of their fellow-men, and in every way lead better and nobler lives because they have known him.

Louise Buchholz, '09.

PROF. EMMA KATE CORKHILL, Ph. D.

Miss Emma Kate Corkhill was the daughter of a much revered Methodist preacher, T. E. Corkhill, who from the very early days of Iowa Methodism ministered to the people of southern Iowa. He was held in highest esteem and for years was one of the strongest factors for good in that part of Iowa. Her mother, Lucinda Corkhill, was a true mother and one of the most helpful of pastor's wives. In this atmosphere from the earliest childhood Miss Corkhill developed a sturdy, pure, and strong Christian character, both positive and decisive.

Eager for knowledge her years up to womanhood were spent in school. She graduated from Iowa Wesleyan University in Mt. Pleasant in 1889, B. A., receiving M. A. from her Alma Mater, and Ph.D. from Boston University in 1893. Later she spent one year in the University of Edinburgh in special study of English Literature, receiving the "highest recommendations" as this school does not grant degrees to women.

She taught a short time in her Alma Mater and then was called to Simpson College in Indianola, Iowa, where she remained seven years. From this place she came to Lawrence College, where she was Professor of English and Literature and later Professor of English Literature for nearly 12 years.

During the summer of 1911 she was not very strong and she was given leave of absence for the first semester of the following school year, but was planning to take up her work again in February. On Thursday, December 11, by the advice of her physician, she went to the hospital for rest, with no thought of serious illness. At early morning on Friday, she fell asleep and on Saturday morning she opened her eyes "to behold the King in His beauty,"—to whom all her life had been given in loving service.

In the earlier portion of her college course she devoted much time to musical study expecting for a time to follow that line for a life work, but temporary failure in health required her to give up this study, and she then entered that which was for her a larger field of work,—that of interpreting truth through a study of the writings of great men. For many years she taught both English Language and Literature, but her work with English Language, though well done, rather irritated her. She wished to give her attention to the thought life of those who used the language. The historical side of literature, or even the development of a systematic study of the whole field of English Literature did not appeal to her so much. Only in recent years did she give many courses from this standpoint. She preferred to study Lowell, Shakspeare, Emerson, Milton, Browning, and Tennyson as great world authors with profound messages for us. She looked for their messages with deep searching and with clear, incisive discrimination. This message thus sought out she gave to her students with such vividness, tempered with such a beautiful spiritual meaning, laden with such deep life values, that those who heard her words caught something of the glory of a soul that had learned from God the true values and their souls were lifted into the better, truer, and more real meaning of life for them.

In reviewing her life the one trait among her many noble qualities that probably appears most prominent is constancy. Constancy in her labors with her students, the faculty, and those about her outside the school; constancy in her friendship for those with whom she met; constancy in her devotion to truth; and constancy in her adherence to her ideals. If you knew Miss Corkhill one day you knew her for all time. It could be said truly of her that she knew herself. She had her plan of life mapped out. The central figure in this plan was the Man of Galilee.

Here lay her strength, not only as a teacher of literature, but also as a woman of such rare magnetism as she displayed especially among the student girls. By word, by example, by kindness, by love, by interest expressed and proved, in joy, in sadness, at play, in classroom, she held up the eternal truths she had learned, and gave them forth, not as mere sentimental fancies, but as dignified, practical, every-day, usable truths that even the indifferent were impelled to subscribe to their worth and influence.

Miss Corkhill's one great aim in living was to give herself to others. Her life with her students, as well as with those she met outside of the school, was an exemplification of the one to whom she speaks in her own poem, called

Answer

"When wouldst thou have me give?
Each day, each hour, thou favored one!
From gray of dawn to set of sun!
And when the sky with stars is set
Pursue the grace of giving yet.

"How wouldst thou have me give?
With joy and utter lavishness!
Keep nothing back thyself to bless!
Gladly give all, in surety
Thy wealth to find in charity.

"Where wouldst thou have me give?
And canst thou ask? Art rich but blind?
On every hand a need thou'lt find!
A need for friendship, hope, and prayer,
To lift a soul up from despair!
A need for inspiration strong
That life's dull steps may lead to song!

"What wouldst thou have me give?
Is Calvary's gray cross quite forgot?
And what it brought thee—knowst thou not?
Thy service give to others free!
So shall thou give thyself to me!

PROFESSOR F. G. RUFF, A. M.

Only one who has attended class under Prof. Ruff can truly appreciate the worth of the man. He had such a deep and sincere interest in his scholars, endeavoring not so much to teach them the technicalities of German as to have them see the spirit and atmosphere of the literature and thus stimulate an interest which is so necessary to a vital appreciation of any subject. He always looked upon us not only as students but as future men and women. He taught us German to fit us for life. I shall always carry with me the trite remarks about life with which he interspersed the class work. As with a number of other teachers under whom I have studied, what I received will not only be measured in terms of college credit alone, but the far greater value will be in terms of sympathy and life. We forget the things learned in large part but we can never lose the kindly smile and the intimate contact which characterized not only his class room work but his other relations to his students. He did his work thoroughly, not by force but by keeping up the interest. On the whole he was a quiet, retiring man but none the less appreciative of student life and ideals. He greatly strengthened the work of the department in the years that he was on the faculty. He was a professor, a friend, a true LAWRENTIAN.

Erwin Shaver.

DEAN MAY ESTHER CARTER, A. M.

Miss May Esther Carter came to Ormsby Hall in 1907. The girls felt at once that hers was a rare personality. As time passed, they learned more and more to appreciate the breadth and depth of her character. They found in her a dean who was interested in the welfare of each student and was always ready to listen to the confidences of the girls and to advise them. They found, also, that they could rely upon her judgment. Miss Carter was soon known among the students as an "inspirational teacher," one with boundless enthusiasm for her subject and the power to impart that enthusiasm to her students.

Miss Carter's influence reached much farther than her class room and Ormsby Hall. She was interested in every activity of the college and, whatever the occasion, her advice and cooperation were invaluable. She had such a delicate sense of fitness of things that she seemed always to do or suggest just the right thing. Every one listened eagerly for Miss Carter's toast at a banquet, her talk at a reception, or her word in prayer meeting or Bible class. Her interest in the college showed itself in many lasting and practical ways. She was influential in securing membership for Lawrence in the Association of Collegiate Alumnae and in securing a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa for Lawrence. It was largely through her influence that May Day was first observed at Lawrence.

Probably the most precious and the most lasting memories of Miss Carter are connected with the religious life of the college. Her Sunday morning prayer services in the Ormsby parlors, her testimonies in prayer meeting and the Y. W. C. A. meetings, and her private talks with the girls about the Christ life,—who shall say how far their influence shall extend? They are today a potent force in the life of many and many a Lawrence student.

DEAN WILLIAM HARPER.

Mr. William Harper came to Lawrence in the year 1907 as teacher of voice in the Lawrence Conservatory of Music. The excellence of his work as a teacher and his reputation as a concert and oratorio singer at once made him a popular and successful instructor. A year later Mr. Harper was made dean of the Conservatory and given charge of its affairs. He proved to be an energetic and successful dean, and built up the conservatory from a struggling school to an institution of recognized worth and standing. He increased the teaching force within a year or two from three to eight instructors, established regular courses of study in different departments, introduced a public school music training course, and developed choral societies, glee clubs, orchestras and various musical organizations. During his administration the Peabody Hall was built and much of the beauty of the building and his adaptation to the work is due to Mr. Harper. In 1913 owing to the serious illness of Mrs. Harper, Dean Harper resigned his connection with the Lawrence Conservatory. He will always be remembered as the person who transformed the conservatory from a struggling to a successful institution and give it the recognized musical reputation.

PROF. JOHN SEEMAN GARNES.

What did Professor Garnes and the School of Expression means to Lawrence and to the individual student who came under its influence? To each student something a little different, perhaps, but to all who came to know her, the school of expression under the "Garnses" stood, more than any other department of Lawrence for one of the great principles which will always make Lawrence just "Lawrence" to all old students.

I seem to see a college picture, one you all know. The old prayer-meeting room students slipping late into the seats near the door. No one notices them. President Plantz is on the platform looking at us with his hands folded, his eyes partially closed. He is sending to each of us the message we have heard again and again. A recipe for happiness from Lawrence:

"See something beautiful every day, think some beautiful thought every day, and do something for some one." Getting and giving the best from the world's heart, the heart of Humanity, the heart of God.

Professor Garns always kept before each student this ideal of the school of expression; first, getting; then giving. Broadening to obtain more of the best and training every faculty to be able to give more completely, more comprehensively of this best. To get always to give.

Perhaps no branch of artistic work is so generally misunderstood as expression. People think that expression is learning to put on a pleasant manner, a mask of some kind, in order to gain the public eye. Thinking people know that one cannot give anything not an inherent part of oneself. To pretend to feel something and pretend it hard makes comedy. The audience never feels glad or sad, or inspired; it just feels "funny."

Professor Garns began with the very first lesson to emphasize this idea of making more of oneself in order to give more. No pupil ever did successful work in expression until he had learned to think, to feel, to act, to live with the author. With each new effort put into the work the student was unconsciously receiving training along four different lines, mental, moral, physical, and artistic. The very first work on any selection was to get all the thought, the one big underlying thought, and then all the branch meanings which flowed in to make up the one big, general current.

The student gained moral training and uplift from the renewed effort, to visualize the beautiful,—to see beautiful scenes and make others see them; from the effort to hear beautiful sounds and make others hear them; to think beautiful thoughts and make others think them; to feel with others the happiness, the grandeur of life as well as its tragedy and sorrow.

The training of the voice and the entire bodily organism to respond to the slightest thought and feeling,—especially those so called positive thoughts and feelings, as happiness, inspirations, love and faith—resulted in a more perfect physical organism for the student.

Professor and Mrs. Garns always kept these ideals before the students. Though they were both often saddened at the failure of many of their students to make any progress, the lack of ability to grasp the real meaning of the work, still from what I have known personally of the pupils, I know that the months and years of striving to comprehend and live with the best—even though many of the students never comprehended and never lived—left an impress on their lives that will never quite be lost.

The "Garnses" school of expression, aimed in all its work to impress and pass on the atmosphere and ideals of Lawrence College and was thus a real, vital part of Lawrence.

The size of the school made it possible for Professor and Mrs. Garns to come into close personal touch with each of the pupils and all who went to them when perplexed or tired, came away cheered and rested.

As from this distance in time and space I look back and think what Lawrence and the school of expression with their big universal ideals meant to my life, I feel that I would pass on to all the world a message which came to me then and has staid with me ever since.

"Have I knowledge? Confounded it shrivels at Wisdom laid bare—

Have I forethought? How pierblind, how blank to the Infinite care!

Do I task any faculty highest, to imagine success?

I but open my eyes—and perfection no more and no less

In the kind I imagined, full-fronts me, and God is seen God,

In the star, in the stone, in the flesh, in the soul and the clod,

And thus, looking within and around me I ever renew

(With that stoop of the soul which in bending upraises it too)

The submission of man's nothing perfect to God's all complete,

As by each new obeisance in spirit, I climb to His feet."

Born, April 16, 1835, Pharsalia, New York.

Degree A. M.

Lawyer at Visalia, California.

Married April 9, 1861, Mary M. Van Epps. Seven children born to them.

2. HENRY COLMAN.

Present address, 102 33rd St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Born, May 14, 1834, Bridgeport, Vt. His father, Rev. Henry R. Colman, joined the New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in 1831, was transferred from the Troy Conference to the Rock River Conference in 1840; became a charter member of the Wisconsin Conference in 1848. He was one of the two persons chosen who selected the site of Lawrence College, and was a charter member of its Board of Trustees. He also was steward of the boarding hall when the college opened in 1849.

Entered Lawrence Feb. 1, 1850, less than two months after the school had opened. He graduated in 1857. Given the degrees from Lawrence of A. B. in 1857; A. M. in 1860; D. D. in 1879. Was tutor in the classics at Lawrence '57 to '58. Entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church in '58. Filled prominent appointments in the Wisconsin Conference such as pastor of Grand Avenue M. E. church; principal of Evansville Seminary '63 to '67; district superintendent of the Milwaukee district '79 to '83; superintendent of Wisconsin Anti-Saloon League '98 to '03. Has been a trustee of Lawrence since 1869. Member of the General Conference of the M. E. church in 1867. In 1883 he organized the Milwaukee City Missionary and Church Extension Society. He was the first president of the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon League convention, and is now secretary and treasurer of the league. He introduced and helped organize in Wisconsin the Federal Council of Churches of Christ, and was in 1914 the chairman of the first Interdenominational conference called under the auspices of the council.

He is a member of the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity.

Married Sept. 20, 1860, his classmate, Miss Lucinda S. Darling.

For his children see Lucinda S. (Darling) Colman. No. 4.

3. JUSTIN MARTYR COPELAND. (Deceased.)

6. FRANCENA MEDORA (KELLOGG) BUCK.

Present address 713 Fourth Ave., Spokane, Washington.

Born Cortland, New York.

The following letter received from Mrs. Buck is so interesting that we have decided to publish it as given:

Rev. Dr. Samuel Plantz.

Dear Sir and Brother:

Your circular letter of October, 1914, asking for "the story of my life," for your on-coming Bulletin, is before me. But having done nothing, seen nothing, said nothing, why should I go into your paper?

As for my father, Chauncy Kellogg, you might say that he was the architect and builder of the first framed Methodist church that was finished and dedicated, in Wisconsin, and the first manual labor I remember to have performed, was holding the dust-pan while my sister swept up the sawdust he made in putting some caps, neither curved nor carved, onto a few of the pew-ends, the morning of its dedication. If there is any thing in the adage concerning "the twig and the tree" my work that morning may account for the trend of my life, which has been "holding dust-pans" for other people, or some other equally ennobling occupation.

You might further say of my father, that he was a member of the legislature that framed a constitution for the state. This constitution however, was not ratified by the people and a better one had to be formed.

As to where I was born I have no knowledge of my own; but tradition reports that it was near about midway between Courtland and McGrawville in the state of New York; but neither of these cities is likely to contend for the honor of my birth a thousand years hence or more.

My education began in a little school house at the "cross roads," then called Kellogg's Corners, now termed Sylvania. This was a board school house—no log affair,—with desks fastened at an obtuse angle to a three-inch strip or shelf, nailed to the wall on three sides of the room. These desks tipped so much, nothing would stay on them; but those three-inch strips were a Godsend, for some of our books would lie there and our inkstands and pens.

For seats, there were benches constructed with much architectural skill by boaring a slanting auger hole in each corner of a long slab through which one end of a stout stick was thrust just far enough to catch our dresses.

Did we learn anything? Of course we did; we learned the alphabet and the multiplication table and that James K. Polk was president of the United States. Of that alphabet, will say that every member of it has stayed with me to this very day; cannot speak so confidently of the multiplication table and will admit that James K. Polk is somewhat dim in my mental vision; but I stood for a brief moment, by his tomb in Nashville, Tenn., and saw his widow on her porch, across the garden, in the war days.

A bit of unhistoric history lodged in my mind, informs me that the first County Teacher's Institute ever organized was held in that school house—seats and desks much improved—about that time.

From this "board schoolhouse" I was transferred to the Southport now Kenosha, public school, from which I entered Lawrence in 1853, where I with two companions were made the first lady-bachelors on record, I believe. It was in 1857 that A. B. was added to my name; and three years later, without the slightest provocation, the "B." was changed to "M." No other institution, such as Harvard or Yale, had, so far, seen fit to add to my titles.

You ask for my military career, if there is any. Yes; I was "high-private" in the calico brigade of the Christian Commission division of the army of "Benevolence." Mrs. Anna Wittenmyer of Iowa, was our captain of the low-diet workers Rev. E. P. Smith of Massachusetts was our colonel; George Stewert of Philadelphia, general and God Almighty Commander in Chief. He never appeared on the battle field in person, but left it to his Lieutenants.

We fought disease and wounds with low-diet, pudding and pancakes. On one occasion that pudding, learned from my New England mother, went into the report of the officer-of-the-day—for whom I had set a dish cooling—and was transmitted to Washington, and somewhere, under the dome, you might find my name if you looked.

My hospital service commenced in Nashville, Tenn., was transferred to Memphis and from thence to the capital of our country. I was in the gallery of the representatives' hall at the joint session of congress when they declared the election of Lincoln to his second term.

As to my travels, you will see they have been

"A sweep continental

But the Saxon still spoken," for I taught, one year in New England and visited "the Hub" and am now near to the other rim of the continent.

My profession for life, home-keeping, was entered upon immediately after my husband, Norman Buck, was mustered out, in August, 1865 and steadily increased in labor and importance for years, then as steadily decreased, till now it is a mere bagatelle. My most noteworthy achievement therein, was serving baked beans and brown-joe—corn-bread—every Sunday morning for thirty-one years, except the hot months of July and August.

Not much of my life has been spent on "Easy street," but mostly in "Anxious row," sometimes in the autumns have moved over onto Thanksgiving avenue, where the purple pansies—heart's-ease—grew along the borders and golden-rods flourish. I never stay long before Duty and Care tug at my skirts, and I find myself back.

As to the by-products of my life, I've puttered a little in both temperance and missionary work; indeed, I "bear the bag" of our local missionary society and have done, for the past twenty-four years as well as maintained a given class in the Sabbath school for the same period; and the toast-master at our Lawrentian banquet on the 29th of December, 1914, said, in introducing me, "My wife and I have dropped in early, at church several Sundays and sat down near a Bible class and listened to the teaching; but I did not know, till this evening, that that teacher was a Lawrentian."

This toast-master is a self-confessed "eaves-dropper" and I want mother Alma to know to what depths of crime some of her sons fall when they get beyond the twitch of her apron strings.

By his own words, you can see this was no light crime it was a conspiracy. "My wife and I." It was with malice aforethought. They went "early to church." It denotes deliberate action. "They sat down." It was a repeated offense. "Several times."

If there is any suitable tribunal before which this toast-master can be brought, I shall willingly "bear testimony."

Your Bulletin and College Life of February, 1913, interests me much. I was in the first "walk-around". I like your "All College Day." Each of our "days" were "all college." There were not enough of us to divide.

I remember with vivid distinctness, one March Saturday, when

"Over the river and through the woods

To Aunt Betsy's camp we went," for a "sugar-off."

Professor Jones was our chaperon. We "waxed" the maple sweetness on pieces of ice, or ate it with wooden spoons, carved by our escorts, from birch bark dishes. The fellows paid the bills. Did we get our feet wet? Don't mention it.

There was tragedy as well as farce, in our college life. Hubbel R. Wood, a student, was drowned in that madly flowing roaring Neenah* in the spring of 1857. After weeks of diligent search, his body was recovered, just at dark, on May 17th. Immediate steps were taken for its interment; and late in the evening, it was decided to hold a service at the grave. The news rapidly spread through the college hall and ladies' building, and self appointed committees rapped at the doors of resident students. With an escort I went across the city to the home of one of my classmates. We roused her parents; and I found access to her room and waked her from her slumber. We joined the procession which was rapidly increasing in numbers. In lieu of torches lanterns marked our way and by the light of one of them, Professor Mason read the funeral service; and what Charles Wolf said of Sir John Moore, was repeated.

"We buried him darkly at dead of night,

Our lanterns dimly burning."

On the last page of that bulletin you emphasize "qualities" and "character" and speak less highly of emotion. Is it not well, sometimes, to break up the fallow ground of the earth and sprinkle it down with tears? And choke the stream of feeling to an overflow, in order to float the soul over the bar of decision, into the smooth waters of conscious acceptance with God? Character and qualities, admirable as they are for this life's work, are no passports to heaven. There is but one countersign at that gate; and it was no unwelcome report that the last seen of Hubbel R. Wood he was on his knees in that frail boat that carried him over the rapids. When our bark reaches the last ripple in life's stream, it will not be "character" nor "qualities" we will need to emphasize, but the all atoning Blood of the Lamb.

How I should like to go back just one Sunday morning to class-meeting room, "A" led by Professor Sampson! Or drop in, some week, to that "active" and "helpful" prayer service, conducted by yourself. I might not feel at home there. I surely should not on the campus with its many new buildings, side-issues and back-attachments though they be, to the original one which you say "stands forth in substantial dignity"; and even this would look strange to me with its later-years porches and ivy covered (?) walls.

There was no "ivy" when the first class wandered through those grounds but there were trees; tree-days and trees. Are the foci of that "butternut ellipse" of the '59ers still there? I know that the protecting arms of the nine fellows in the circle have long since withered. Do the girls still abide?

I am the owner "in fee simple" of one of those campus trees. It is the elm just to the right of the west gate. My late classmate, W. D. Story, "in consideration of friendship and good will," deeded that tree to me. The deed was properly recorded in my heart. Mr. Story had a right to make that transfer, for he "was well seise of" that piece of "real estate," having obtained it first hand of Dame Nature by dint of shovel and pick.

I do not begrudge the use of its spreading shade to returned alumni on a hot June day, or even to the under-graduates, but should you see a woodman, with axe over his shoulder, approaching that tree, I grant you full "power of attorney-in-fact," for his arrest.

And now, what shall I say further? Nothing; I have swung around the circle and am wondering who will pay the printer's bill if each of Lawrence sons and daughters should follow my wordy example.

Wishing you a marvelous career in the future,

I am very respectfully,

Mrs. F. M. Buck, 713 4th Ave.

Spokane, Wash., January 25, 1915.

*Neenah was the original name of the Fox River, and ought never to have been changed; just as the Oregon was the original name of our own broadly flowing Columbia which Bryant uses in his Thanatopsis.

Member of the assembly from the city of Milwaukee at the legislative session of 1865, and was one out of eleven of twenty-seven democratic members who voted for ratification of the XIII Amendment to the Constitution of the United States forever abolishing slavery. For several years, at different times member of the common council and of the board of school commissioners, of the city of Milwaukee, but resigned in each instance, for business reasons. Was a Court Commissioner of the State for Milwaukee county for six years and then resigned. Was for six years chairman of the examining committee for admission to the bar. Was elected district attorney of Milwaukee county and held the office for two years. Was admitted to the bar of this state in 1862, at Milwaukee, and later to the Supreme Court and to the United States Circuit and District Courts, and has been in active practice in all of the Courts ever since. Whilst this practice has been an all around one, has nevertheless made a specialty of habeas corpus, certiorari and mandamus, and requisition and extradition proceedings, and of special pleading.

XVIII. CLASS OF 1874.*151. ROBERT JACKSON GAMBLE.

Present address, Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Born, near Akron, Genesee county, New York, February 7, 1851, of Scotch-Irish ancestry. His mother was second cousin to Andrew Jackson. His father was a distant relative to Col. Robert Gamble of Virginia and distinguished officer of the War of the Rebellion.

Early life spent on a farm. Attended the common schools. Later pursued the occupation of a teacher. Through part of his course in Lawrence he supported himself by teaching and finally graduated with honors. After leaving Lawrence University studied law with the firm of Jenkins, Elliot & Wheeler of Milwaukee, and was admitted to the bar in Wisconsin. Located at Yankton and formed partnership with his brother, the late John R. Gamble, in January, 1876. They were associated in the practice of law until the death of the latter, in August, 1891. Senator Gamble received the degrees of B. S. and M. S., honorary degree of LL. D. from Lawrence in 1909.

Senator Gamble was district attorney for the Second judicial district of the Territory; city attorney of the city of Yankton for two terms; and state senator in 1885. He represented his state as congressman-at-large in the Fifty-fourth congress, and again in the Fifty-sixth congress. In 1900 he withdrew as a candidate for congress and announced his candidacy for the United States senate. He was elected in January, 1901; re-elected in 1907.

Senator Gamble has been an active member of the Republican organization of his state for many years. He was chairman of the Republican state convention in 1892, and also in 1893. Was also chairman of the convention in 1891 that inaugurated the movement which led to the representation of the state at the World's Columbian exposition, Chicago, in 1893. During the long struggle for statehood in territorial days, he recognized the necessity for congressional action looking to the admission of the state into the Union, in opposition to many who took extreme views that the people of the proposed state could act independently of congress. On July 4, 1888, he delivered an oration at Yankton, sustaining this position, which attracted general attention throughout the territory.

Member of Cosmos Club, Washington, D. C.; National Institute of Social Sciences, life member of the State Historical Society of South Dakota; member of Phi Beta Kappa fraternity.

Married, in 1884, Carrie S. Osborne, at Portage. One son, Ralph A., graduate of Princeton University in the class of 1909 and of the law department of Columbia University in 1912. Practicing law, No. 62 Cedar Street, New York City.

183. JUSTUS HENRY NELSON.

Present address, Avenida Generalissimo Deodoro, No. 151, Para', Brazil.

Born in the primeval forest, in the township of Menomonee, Waukesha County, Wisconsin, December 22, 1850.

Entered Lawrence in January, 1872; School of Theology of Boston University, graduating in 1879 with the degree of S. T. B. Degree of A. M. from Lawrence in 1878. The year after graduating from the School of Theology was spent in eclectic studies in the Medical School of Boston University.

In the Spring of 1880 was admitted on trial in the New England Southern Annual Conference, ordained elder and appointed as pastor at Para', Brazil by Bishop Bowman. At this place has been pastor for thirty-five years, earning his own living by teaching English, German, Portuguese, etc. From 1890 to 1897 was Presiding Elder of the Brazil district of the New England Southern (Providence) Conference.

For twenty-one years (1890-1910) he edited and published "O Apologista Christao Brasileiro" (The Brazilian Christian Advocate). During those 21 years of editorial work, translated and wrote and published more than one hundred Methodist and other hymns. Most of his hymns are now in use in the Hymnals of different denominations in Brazil and Portugal.

During the time of the publication of the paper, he was twice prosecuted in the courts of Para' on account of articles published. The first prosecution was on the charge of "Outrages against the Roman Catholic Apostolic religion." The two obnoxious articles which formed the basis for the charge treated of the Roman worship of the Virgin Mary. He was acquitted of the charge in the lower court. The State Attorney appealed to the Supreme Court of the State, and in November, 1893 was sentenced to four months, three days and twelve hours imprisonment in the common jail. He served out his sentence. The whole affair greatly multiplied the number of his personal friends and of the friends of Protestantism in Para'.

The second prosecution was made by an Englishman. He was acquitted. The paper was for the most part distributed gratuitously. In December, 1910, he suspended the publication, on account of the increasing hard times.

"My choicest recreation has been the amateur gratuitous practice of medicine and extraction of aching teeth. My specialty in the medical line is patients who seem liable to get well easily. Very serious cases are not in my line, and I usually send them to the City Hospital, where I have carte blanche to send in as many patients as I like; and they are never refused admission. My best 'record' in the gratuitous extraction of teeth was six thousand three hundred and eighty-three (6383) teeth during the year 1914. Professional dentists in Para' charge three dollars (U. S. gold) per tooth for extracting."

Married to Miss Fannie Bishop Capen at Stoughton, Massachusetts, on April 13, 1880.

"We have four children living, the third child, Milton Henry Nelson having died in infancy. The eldest, William Taylor Nelson, A. B., is now 34 years old. The second, Luther Townsend Nelson, A. B., M. D., is 32 years old. The fourth, Sarah Louise Nelson, A. B., is 26 years old. The fifth, Bessie Aurora Nelson, is 19 years old. They were all born in Para'. All except the youngest are graduates of the College of Liberal Arts of Boston University. The youngest is now a sophomore in Reed College at Portland, Oregon. William spent seven years after graduation in explorations in the Amazon wilderness and in civil engineering work in Para' and Manaus. He has since been engaged in engineering work in Oregon. Luther graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1912, and immediately after graduation spent six months as surgeon of the Yale Expedition of 1912 for exploring the Inca antiquities in Peru. He is now married and settled in medical practice in Portland, Oregon. Louise after graduation entered Y. W. C. A. work at Yonkers, N. Y. She spent the year 1914 as the very successful General Secretary of the Y. W. C. A. at Newburgh on the Hudson. She is now in Portland, recuperating her overworked nerves, but otherwise in excellent health.

"I am planning to return to the United States for good in 1930."

"Since returning to the Y. W. C. A. in 1900 I have been chiefly occupied with developing a system of training employed officers. This year there are 60 enrolled in the graduate course of the National Training School from various countries. About 50 younger college women were in the Preparatory Training Centers in Philadelphia, Chicago, San Francisco, etc., and more than 60 in the departmental summer courses at headquarters. Largely owing to the generosity of Miss Grace H. Dodge, our first president, the Training School is equipped with a beautiful building at 52nd Street and Lexington avenue, New York City. This year I am working on a History of the Young Women's Christian Association for which my experience as editor of the Laurentian and corrector of some hundreds of thousands of essays has in a measure prepared me by chastening my style. Attendance at the first World's Conference in London in 1898 and acquaintance with some of the founders of the English and World's Movements, were then and at two subsequent world's conferences, has helped me with the subject matter."

Mr. Voss says: The fire service is hazardous but one becomes accustomed to it and insensible to danger. By looking forward and not backward, upward and not downward, one can scale the heights with ease. This commercial age has made complex conditions owing to skyscrapers and has caused us to use every known device to combat these new conditions. Regardless of these hazardous conditions, when the great alarms are sounded there comes a thrill of life which is responsive to the call for action.
